COUNTY NEWS.

Newburgh.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—As a new subscriber to your paper I like it very much. I think THE EXPRESS is the best paper printed in Napanee to-day, and I know the majority of the people think the same if they acknowledge the truth. Times are good here at present as taxes are down. We have the right man in the right place as reeve, and we should keep him there. Our sidewalks are in the best repair that they have been for years.

—We are very much pleased to see Mr. Stickney around able to attend to business again as he was very low at one time.

—Our school is giving good satisfaction under the management of the present teachers.

—Mr. D. A. Burdett is putting up a nice dwelling house on Front-st. "Dan" is an enterprising citizen. I wish we had a few more like him.

—Mr. Jacob Detlor has remodeled his house and made a cosy little one out of it. It stands in front of St. Jacob's well and when you raise the lid of the well you can see the whole outside and inside of the house. Don't you believe it? If not come and see for yourself.

—A new sidewalk has been laid down on Baldwin-st. It was badly needed.

—Two weddings in Newburgh next week. Wouldn't you like to know who the happy parties are?

—The flower of Newburgh, our dress-maker, Miss Madden, has removed from the village.

—Mr. George Stickney and his mother have returned home from their visit among their relations up west. They must have enjoyed the visit judging from their looks.

—We are going to have a vote on the Scott Act in Newburgh. It can't be said that the Scott Act keeps the price of grain down, for when the Dunkin Bill was in force grain was high.

—Next Saturday is our county show and I don't want you to forget it.

—D. B. Stickney & Co. have started on another batch of reapers and mowers for another year. That speaks well for the firm in years past.

—The farmers are nearly all done threshing around this section and they say that grain yields well.

—Mr. D. K. Aylsworth has been very poorly but is recovering.

—The council meets to-night. If it was not for that we could give you a little more news.

JACK THINKER.

Cloyne.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—Among the many influences brought to bear on the electoral vote in the late contest in Lennox by the Grits, says the well informed Picton Gazette, was that of colonization roads. Wonder where Lennox colonization roads are? Evidently the writer is on a par with an English journal some years ago, when it said the Ottawa river emptied into Lake Huron. The statements of Tory journals, principally imbibed from the Mail, are most ridiculous and absurd and fast bringing them into contempt with all good honest men.

PERSONAL.—Messrs. J. and D. and T. Perry drove to Tamworth on business on the 25th ult. The government colonization road engineer, Mr. P. H. Aylesworth, paid an official visit to this section on the 19th ult. Among the guests at Mr. Will Spencer's, head of the famed Massinoge, on the evening of the 28th inst., were Mr. D. A. Spencer and wife, Mr. Beausoleil and wife, Mr. Burrows, P. L. S. for Lennox and Addington, Napanee, Mr. L. T. Hanston of the firm of McLaren & Co., and the writer. Mr. L. Johnston of Belleville was negotiating for the purchase of Mr. Waite's farm, eastern division, on the 23rd ult. The difference between buyer and seller was so far they failed to connect. He was accompanied by his amiable wife who was amused and delighted with the scenery, invigorated by the healthy air balmy breezes and exhilarating drive over the winding rugged highways ascents and precipitous declivities found in this region. Mr. Elias McKim of Tamworth was prospecting in flour and oxen on the 22nd inconvenience. I give one instance: Last Saturday morning by the up train from Napanee a lady with two children stopped off here with their luggage; it was raining at the time—a not very pleasant situation to be landed on a platform made from ties. Some men carried her trunks down to the hotel where she could put up until her friends came for her.

Bath.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—Bath gardens producing this year second crop of beans, cucumbers and raspberries.

—Bass and pike fishing still remains good in our bay at this late season, the result no doubt of the fishing nets being withdrawn. Next year we predict a glorious sporting time for anglers.

—Dr. Kennedy's dwelling is progressing rapidly, and when completed will be an ornament to the place. Who next?

—Our hotels are working splendidly, preserving good order and making every effort to accommodate the public by adding to their improvements.

—The movement in barley has not commenced owing to the extreme lowness of price. We do hope to see a slight advance now, as the month of October has set in cool and malsters are making enquiries for the famous Bay of Quinte barley. May our farmers get a good price is the wish of the ROSICRUCIAN.

Selby.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—Lots of rain and roads muddy.

—The new bell in the Roman Catholic Church, Napanee, can be distinctly heard here.

—Mr. Alex. Rose returned last week from Manitoba, to spend the winter at home.

—Mrs. John McKim has been seriously ill for some time, but we are pleased to say she is now convalescent.

—Mrs. John Quigley went last week to visit friends in Chatham, and other parts of western Ontario.

—Mr. Charles Dean has enlarged his establishment by the addition of a new ware-room. He has Mr. Werden, a good wood-worker, engaged, and is building a lot of cutters for the winter trade.

—Mr. Wells' sale, a fortnight ago, was well attended. Chief Allen disposed of goods and chattels at a rapid rate. Mr. Wells will move to Michigan in about two weeks. His son has already been there about two months.

—There are a number of vacant houses in Selby at present, but the prospects are that every dwelling will be occupied during the winter.

—Active preparations are being made for the anniversary tea next Wednesday night, in the C. M. Church. A good programme of speeches, recitations and music will be provided and the ladies will spread an attractive table.

Odessa.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—We were pleased to see Grand Curiosity in our town again, notwithstanding the old bird is riding in on a rail. Never mind, my good fellow, we will never send you out in the same way.

—The Ernestown Agricultural Society held their show last Saturday and although the rain did its best the show was good. Everything exhibited was of first-class order and the officers are to be congratulated on another success. They say that another year they will have worked the business up to a point that they can successfully compete for the honors with the county shows.

—At last, after Mr. P. P. Booth's daughter, Annie, was run over by furious driving through our streets, our citizens have formed themselves into a committee with the necessary funds to prosecute the first they can catch now at such reckless work.

—The east end of our town is being lighted by lamps being placed in front of resident's premises at their own expense. How nice it would be if our centre and west end parties would do the same. It would be so convenient to see on dark nights how to climb around the holes and over

SCOTT ACT CONVENTION.

It Decides to Submit the Act at Once.

A convention of temperance men favoring the submission of the Scott Act to the electors of the county, was held as per announcement, in the Town Hall, on Saturday last. Owing, doubtless, to the inclemency of the weather, a heavy down-pour of rain continuing nearly throughout the whole day, the attendance was small, there not being more than fifty or sixty persons present. The meeting was, however, very enthusiastic, the majority present expressing themselves as anxious for the fray. The chair was occupied by Rev. M. L. Pearson, pastor of the Eastern Methodist Church, Napanee, President of the Scott Act Association, and Dr. Meacham, of Odessa, was the secretary.

The Chairman, in his opening remarks, stated the object of the meeting, and urged prompt action in the circulation of the petitions. He thought it best not to be hasty in bringing on the election. Hastings was about to organize. The temperance people of Frontenac had commenced work, a meeting having already been held there, and another was called in the city of Kingston for some time next week; also that the people of Hastings were merely waiting for us to take the initial step. As for Prince Edward county, its petitions have been deposited with the Government, and an election ordered for October 30th.

Several others spoke, some urging on the election this year, while others, though as much in earnest as temperance men could be, thought they should wait another year before taking a vote. Their argument was that as the Dunkin Act had been a failure in this county, partially because neither Hastings nor Frontenac had a prohibitory measure, placing this county between two fires, and as the movement was started both in Frontenac and Hastings, and they would no doubt be gone on with successfully, the temperance people of Lennox & Addington should wait, but not cease working, till it was carried in either or both of these counties, and then bring the Act before the people here. They had no doubt then it would be carried by a large majority.

The Secretary stated that he had most of the petitions in, and the returns showed that the names already received numbered 1,150, with some 200 names yet to be obtained before they could be filed, but as several of the polling divisions had not yet been heard from, and there was yet two weeks to work he did not see any difficulty in obtaining the requisite number, and so bring on the election at once.

After several other opinions were expressed in favor of deferring the time of polling and otherwise, it was Moved by Mr. T. W. Casey, Napanee, seconded by Mr. Allen Caton, Newburgh, that the meeting be adjourned for two weeks, the canvassers in the meantime to go on with their work, and that the Secretary be authorized to insert the necessary notice of application to the Government for submis-and seller was so far they failed to connect. He was accompanied by his amiable wife who was amused and delighted with the scenery, invigorated by the healthy air, balmy breezes and exhilarating drive over the winding rugged highways, ascents and precipitous declivities found in this region. Mr. Elias McKim of Tamworth was prospecting in flour and oxen on the 22nd and 23rd ult. Messrs. Chown domiciled at the hotel on the night of the 22nd ult. They were on business in connection with their firm in Kingston. Mr. Charles Kenyon, formerly of this place but now of Belleville, is gradually sinking from his malady. No hopes are entertained of his recovery. Miss Lucy Armstrong is engaged in millinery and dressing-making at Mr. B. Clark's. Mr. P. Kenefec, manager for Gilmore & Co., Trenton, calls occasionally. He is at present very busy arranging for the winter's lumber campaign. Mr. S. A. Weatherston who succeeded the late Mr. Geo. Hartgraves as manager for Mr. William Sutherland, Belleville came up to attend to the latter's lumber interests and to haul down five thousand logs over Gilmore & Co.'s tramway from the Massinogee to Loon Lake. Mr. F. Burrows, P. S. Inspector, was a guest at Mr. Will Spencer's, head of the Missinogee, on Sunday night, 28th ult. on his way to the northern part of the county. While there he told the writer of many of the recent events in Napanee.

Yarker.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—On Friday morning between 9 and 10 o'clock the following despatch was received here:—"Mrs. Cannon, meet me at Harrowsmith; Herbert is dead. Dr. Cannon." The sad news caused a shock to all in the village and Mr. Fred Shibley, operator, conveyed the telegram to Mrs. Cannon which was a great shock to her, it coming so sudden and unexpected. She was soon surrounded with sympathizing friends and offers of assistance given. Teams and conveyances were procured and a number with Mrs. Cannon went to Harrowsmith to be ready to receive the corpse on the arrival of the train from Sharbot Lake. Imagine their surprise when the train arrived. Dr. Cannon was alone. The telegram was a mistake; it should have read:—"Mrs. Cannon—Meet me at Harrowsmith—Herbert is better." The blunder is to be regretted as Mrs. Cannon was at considerable expense telegraphing to friends in the west; besides, the shock to her feelings was terrible. Dr. Cannon desires to tender his thanks to the people of the village for their kindness to him and Mrs. Cannon in their supposed bereavement.

—A large number, accompanied by the band, went by the evening train to the Good Templars' picnic, Cedar Point. The rain continuing on their arrival none left the cars and those on the ground left and went on the train as far as Moscow station. The Tamworth portion went on home; the Napanee and Yarker portion remained at the station until the return of the train. The band played several selections, dancing by some was indulged in and addresses were given by Mr. W. S. Williams and Mr. A. Henry and an excellent reading styled "The Three Bachelors," by Miss Allen, daughter of Chief Allen, Napanee. A very pleasant time was spent in spite of the rain.

—Friday evening Mr. W. S. Williams, Secretary of the N. T. & Q. R.R. met the villagers of Colebrook at Mr. G. Garrison's store. The object of the meeting was to come to some amicable arrangement about the location of the station. Mr. Williams, on behalf of the Company, wanted the people of Colebrook to point out where they would like to have a station located and the Company would build them one. Mr. Samuel Bell addressed Mr. Williams for the villagers and asked the Company to build themselves in writing to build us as good a station as there is along the line where they would point out and to build no station at Yarker nor allow anyone else to build one there, then they would be satisfied. Mr. Williams said he would do his best. Mr. Samuel Bell said, "We will communicate with Mr. Bathum and let him know our demands" and the conference ended. The Company will now build a station at Yarker.

—A meeting of the trustees of the Methodist Church was held in the church this week. Rev. Mr. Bates in the chair. Considerable business was done. One part the public is interested in is that the seats in the church are free to all. A collection will be taken up to meet expenses instead of pew rent.

—A daughter of Mr. Hugh Davey of Ernestown was buried in the cemetery here, Rev. Mr. Bates conducting the services. There was a very large turn out of friends who accompanied the remains to their last resting place.

—Mr. Thos. Love, farmer, Ernestown, was taken to his last home to-day. He has been a great sufferer for the last two years. His remains were taken to Cark's Mills cemetery, Rev. Mr. Elliott conducting the services. Mr. Love was highly respected and a very large number attended the funeral. He leaves a wife and child to mourn his loss.

—The Railway Company have fenced in the ground they purchased and it is hoped they will soon provide shelter for persons having to take the cars at this point. Some have suffered great inconvenience the first they can catch now at such reckless work.

—The east end of our town is being lighted by lamps being placed in front of resident's premises at their own expense. How nice it would be if our centre and west end parties would do the same. It would be so convenient to see on dark nights how to climb around the holes and over the rotten plank in the board walks, the same which are a good showing of our magnanimous council.

—The Tories were well pleased with the assessor's work, as evidenced by their entering four appeals only.

Personals.

—Mr. David Richardson spent Sunday in Belleville.

—Mr. Benjamin Howell of Deseronto spent Sunday in town.

—Miss Nettie Bowen left on Thursday of last week for Dresden, Ont.

—Mr. J. F. Roblin of Picton gave THE EXPRESS a call on Tuesday.

—Mr. Charles Diekens of Woodstock is visiting in Napanee and vicinity.

—A. D. Fraser, Esq., of Hawley, has returned from Kansas, evidently much improved in health.

—Mr. T. Coughlin, formerly conductor on the N. T. & Q. Railway, has accepted a similar position on the Bay of Quinte Railway.

—Mr. L. T. Lochhead left on Tuesday last for Kingston to commence his course in Arts at Queen's University. We wish him success.

—Mrs. A. P. Tregent, who has been visiting with her mother, Mrs. M. P. Roblin, for some time, left for Woodstock on Monday evening where she will reside in future.

—Miss Williams returned on Tuesday from a two months' visit to Grand Rapids, Mich. Miss Blanche Williams, who accompanied her to the West, will remain in Grand Rapids with her uncle and attend a young lady's seminary for a year.

—Dr. W. J. Webster, son of John Webster Esq., has decided to open an office at White Lake, Aurora County, Dakota. He made a tour of the district and is delighted with the climate and the country. We wish him a full measure of success.

LITERARY NOTES.

Popular Science Monthly.

The October number of the monthly now to hand would seem to completely "fill the bill," as a scientific magazine. The object of the magazine is to bring forward distinctively and prominently the higher human aspects of scientific enquiry, and every one of the fifteen articles of the present number sustains this character. The first paper, by Dr. F. J. Shepherd, on "The Significance of Human Anomalies" is an illustrated and very timely exposition of those aberrations of structure in the human system which for centuries were the puzzle of anatomists, but which are now completely cleared up by the doctrine of descent and evolution. Francis Galton's paper on the "Measurement of Character" is a skillful and most suggestive attempt to bring the higher human characteristic within the pale of quantitative science. Lord Rayleigh's survey of "The recent Progress of Physical Science," which was his presidential address before the Montreal meeting of the British Association, is given in full, as it deserves to be, though elsewhere generally it appears only in abstracts. Being of great interest in itself and the most striking production of a memorable occasion, readers will especially value it for its completeness. A biographical sketch and a fine portrait of Lord Rayleigh are also given. "Did I Go to the County," in Lord Williams' series on the "Chemistry of Cookery," "Wages, Capital and Poor Men," "The Applied Aspect of Mechanics," "The Elements of Happiness," conclusion, "Dances and Lightening," "The Church's Moral," and "The Origin of Civilized Man," are all free, readable and meaty papers. Prof. J. D. G. G. contributes "Further Remarks on the Greek Question" and the editor keeps up his lively fight with the Masses for more room and higher consideration for science in education. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 50 cents a number, $7 a year.

—A New Suit. Faded articles of all kinds restored to their original beauty by Diamond Dyes. Perfect and simple. See at all druggists. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

What to Do

If troubled with an unhealthy, slow-healing sore use McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Ointment. You will find it invaluable for healing, cleaning and completely removing your trouble. If the blood is out of order take with it a few doses of McGregor's Speedy Cure from T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores and at Jas. Aylesworth's drug store, Tamworth.

seconded by Mr. Allen Caton, Newburgh, that the meeting be adjourned for two weeks, the canvassers in the meantime to go on with their work, and that the Secretary be authorized to insert the necessary notice of application to the Government for submission of the Act in this county.

Moved in amendment by Mr. S. Gibson, seconded by Mr. Marsh Bogart, that the canvassers go on with their work for the next two weeks, but that no notices be inserted in the papers till after the next meeting.

The original motion was carried, and a meeting was appointed to be held in the Town Hall, two weeks hence, Oct. 11.

A subscription list was circulated to defray current expenses and the meeting then adjourned.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—The Ocean King has arrived at Gibraltar.

—Teemer beat Ross at Point of Pines on Monday.

—Arnica & Oil Liniment is the best remedy known for stiff joints.

—A man was killed at Eddy's saw mills. Hull, on Saturday.

—A verdict of wilful murder has been returned in the Mattawa tragedy.

—Ryan, the man suspected of the Jackfish Bay tragedy, cannot be found.

—The Beamishes, father and sons, were adjudged guilty of manslaughter on Monday, in the Blythe murder case.

—The history of Downs' Elixir is identified with the history of New England for the last fifty years. It cures coughs and colds.

—Costiveness is the cause of the intolerable "bad breath" of multitudes. Dr. Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters remove the cause and prevent the evil, and cost only 25 cents.

—Gladstone, having been accused of supporting the Roman Catholic Church, denies the statement and demands the name of the author.

—"My daughter has taken the medicine faithfully, according to directions, and her health and spirits are now perfect. The humor is all gone from her face. I wish every anxious mother might know what a blessing Ayer's Sarsaparilla is in such cases."

—Near Pittsburgh, Pa., the other day, a tramp met a young lady on horseback, knocked her on the head and went off with the horse. It would have been more fashionable if he had knocked the horse on the head and run away with the young lady. He was evidently never a coachman.

—Sufferers from the effects of quinine, used as a remedy for chills and fever, will appreciate Ayer's Ague Cure, a powerful tonic bitter composed wholly of vegetable substances, without a particle of any noxious drug. Its action is peculiar, prompt and powerful, breaking up the chill, curing the fever, and expelling the poison from the system, yet leaving no harmful or unpleasant effect upon the patient.

—What is most amusing about the numerous elopements in the United States is the fact that the proud fathers, who are so much interested in the low marriages of the daughters of the rich, begin life themselves with the daughters of the poor. Drake, the New York politician, was a son of a poor man, and his daughter married a rich man. The same is the case with many other politicians. The same is the case with many other politicians.

Figures Won't Lie.

The figures showing the enormous yearly sales of Kidney-Wort, demonstrate its value as a medicine beyond dispute. It is a purely vegetable compound of certain roots, leaves and berries known to have special value in Kidney troubles. Combined with these are remedies acting directly on the Liver and Bowels. It is because of this combined action that Kidney-Wort has proved such an unequalled remedy in all diseases of these organs.

Side by side with the construction of huge ironclads has proceeded the development of a specific bane for these prodigious war-ships—the torpedo. This implement of destruction has been greatly perfected through the well-known inventions of Whitehead, Swartzopf, Lay, and others, and through devices now under examination in this country by a board appointed for the purpose. In some of these, gun-cotton or dynamite is invoked to increase the destructiveness of the projectile. Ericsson's Destroyer, with its submarine bow gun for shooting torpedoes several hundred feet through the water, has a character all its own. In torpedoes of the Whitehead and Haight-Lay class, which are not fired from guns, but provide their own motive power, compressed air, or carbonic acid gas, or electricity, as the case may be, furnishes the propulsion or controls the point of explosion. In the modern torpedo-boat, to use the words of Lieutenant-Commander Barber to the Senate Naval Committee, we find "the most wonderful combination of speed, lightness, and handiness that is now afloat, and of these boats Europe possesses hundreds." A cut on page 579, representing a fleet of Yarrow sea-going torpedo vessels passing each other at a speed of twenty knots to attack line-of-battle ships, gives an idea of the possibilities of this form of warfare.

Germany has arranged to add no fewer than one hundred and fifty torpedo vessels to her coast defenses. Russia began several years ago the construction of one hundred torpedo boats, after her experience of torpedo warfare in the Black Sea during her last conflict with Turkey. England this year adds four new torpedo boats to her fleet, and has great quantities of torpedoes ready for use. France and Italy are among the foremost in this rivalry, and the great armored ships of the latter power carry torpedo launches in the holds.

Not long ago, on the coast of Algiers, Admiral Jaures made practical tests of Torpilleurs, which he declared to be decisive of their efficiency. Two torpedo boats easily attained the great speed of eighteen knots an hour; and as these boats are constructed for use as rams, it is evident that a squadron attempting to escape at the speed of an ordinary ironclad might be overtaking and struck at a high velocity by the pursuers. If, on the other hand, the armored ships move at full speed against the torpedo boats, the time during which the latter are under the fire of the artillery is so reduced as to greatly avoid the chances of their being hit and sunk. The trials at Algiers were made in a calm sea, with bright moonlight, at a fixed hour of the night, when the officers and men of the squadron were on the lookout. The torpilleur, nevertheless, was not desisted until within a distance of three-fifths of a mile; and as the boat and squadron were approaching each other, about one minute after the former was seen she was within sixteen feet of the admiral's vessel. No fact could more strikingly show how like a thunder-bolt the perfect torpedo vessel of the future will hurl itself upon its gigantic adversary, trusting to its speed, and to the minuteness of the target it furnishes, for protection against his cannon.

torpedo vessel of the future will hurl itself upon its gigantic adversary, trusting to its speed, and to the minuteness of the target it furnishes, for protection against his cannon.

Experiments made at Toulon this summer in a high wind and rough sea showed that the boats invariably hit the target with their torpedoes, in spite of the disturbance produced by the rush of speed. Above all, since the torpedo system is based on the attack of a blockading squadron not by a single boat, but by a swarm of boats, the chances of destroying several costly iron clads with these comparatively cheap assailants are multiplied.

What special counter-agencies have been provided to meet this danger? First, it is believed that the electric light will prevent these enemies from stealing swiftly up without discovery. Unquestionably this light will be an aid; but the boats would come in from all directions, and the light would help the assailants as well as the assailed, especially as a flotilla might include gun-boats firing heavy projectiles at a well-illuminated target. In the second place, a modern armored squadron has its own torpedo launches and its despatch-boats for scouting. Still, these smaller craft would run some risk of being mistaken for the enemy, and of attacking each other. The main source of defence, however, is the suspension of a steel netting several yards distant from the side of the vessel. While the use of these hanging screens is undeniable, it is obvious that they must greatly reduce the speed of the vessel and interfere with its handling. Even for protecting vessels at anchor they are cumbersome to carry.

One English writer is so impressed by the ruin which a fleet of torpedo vessels could produce that he proposes changes in construction for iron-clads, sacrificing speed to fighting power, and then having a faster squadron to accompany these slower ones. His vessel would be "a short and broad and strong-bowed ship, with a tumble-home side, and of deep draught; a cellular ship both above and below a submerged armor-plated deck, placed five feet below the water line, the bow and stern only being cased in armor; a recessed side of hull, shelving downward from the water line, this recess to be protected by a stout fixed net-work extending fifteen feet downward to arrest the blow of the torpedo, but not carried around the bow, since "increased cellular protection with cork fillings" can be afforded to that part of the ship. The novel feature of design in this device, which we have described in the phraseology of its proposer, "is the projecting side at the water line, to admit of a recess below, thus affording a water cushion to minimize the effect of a torpedo explosion."

It is suggestive to find the enormous iron-clads seeking protection against their swarming little enemies—the Goliaths alive to the dangers in the slings of the Davids.

"I never saw such a woman in all my life," said Bass, "you are never satisfied with anything." "People who knew the man I took for a husband," replied Mrs. B., "think, on the contrary, that I am very easily satisfied."

Clever Jewel Robbers.

"Yes," said a jeweller, "we are constantly on the watch for thieves. Of course the imperative rule is not to let goods go out of your sight until you get the money. The trick of having goods sent to hotels and boarding houses with bills for collection is so stale that the undeviating rule is to keep your goods in sight. But a shrewd fellow once managed to get three watches from me by a clever dodge. A bright sharp-looking person came in one day and said: 'I am from Ohio, and have a commission to buy some goods for my sister who is about to be married there.' He picked out a bill of five hundred dollars' worth of various articles and said: 'Just send them around to my store on Broadway at twelve o'clock,' naming a well known carpet store in Broadway. The goods were sent by a clerk, who found the customer apparently engaged in showing carpets and perfectly at home. He recognized the clerk and said: 'Ah! just step this way, and I will give you a check.' He went with the clerk to a desk, drew a check, and took the goods. He appeared to be so perfectly at home that the clerk had not the slightest suspicion. Of course the check was worthless, and we found that he had secured the desk privilege at the carpet store by pretending that he was buying a large stock of carpets among other purchases in the city. He fooled five jewellers in New York, and others in other cities. One day a swarthy, foreign looking, well dressed young man called on a brother jeweller and handed him his card—'Alexander Dumas, Prussian Legation, Washington.' He said he was with his wife and child at the St. Nicholas Hotel, and wanted to buy some watches and jewellery, for which he would pay cash. He said his wife was too sick to leave the hotel, and wanted the goods sent with the bill. The jeweller thought he would make a sure thing of it and take the goods himself. He went to the St. Nicholas, was told that Mr. Dumas was stopping there and was shown to his room. Mr. Dumas was busy writing, but welcomed the jeweller cordially. 'Ah,' he said, 'I am glad you have come. I am sorry that my wife is confined to her bed, I will just step into the next room and let her make her selections.' The jeweller in a moment of weakness, consented. After waiting five minutes he began to get nervous. He did not like to disturb a sick lady, but went to the office to make some inquiries. There he found that Mr. Dumas had just stepped out, and had no wife or child in the house. He was finally caught, after he had played the same game on a number of jewellers, and lodged in Sing Sing. When he was captured he tried to conciliate the last victim by the presentation of a beautiful overcoat. But the overcoat proved to have been stolen."

At Killiseo, writes a correspondent, blackened faces were almost the rule, and every native woman had her face coated with a mixture of seal oil and soot. It gives them a wild strange look, and they giggle in the silliest way when one points to them. The old theories that they wore it as a sign of mourning, because

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alternative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

gives them a wild strange look, and they giggle in the silliest way when one points to them. The old theories that they wore it as a sign of mourning, because they were angry or rejoiced, or penitent are exploded now, and it is known that it is simply a protection against the gnats and mosquitoes on land, and to keep their faces from burning when out in their canoes. It is an excellent cosmetic for the women, keeping their complexion soft and smooth, and when the wash it off on grand occasions their faces are as creamy white as the fairest of their Japanese sisters. A group of these blackamoors made a picture as they sat inside a cabin-door weaving their pretty baskets of the fine inside bark and roots of the cedar. One younger woman wore a silver pin sticking out through her under lip, another had a bone labrette, or tip ring, put through like a collar button, and the third, a wrinkled old crone, wore a great plug of wood over an inch across. These lip ornaments are worn by nearly all the women of the island tribes, and are a mark of age as certain as a family record. The big wooden plugs that they put in in their sere and yellow days push the lip out and give a hileous look to the wrinkled, blackened old crones who wear them. Nose-rings and ear rings, silver rings on their fingers and bracelets on their wrists complete their full dress array, and if they only wore something more barbaric than shawls and calico dresses, they would be far more interesting as savage studies.

Venetian Women.

The poor women who are the only examples of the sex generally visible, are on the whole inferior to the men in good looks. For one thing their dress is the most unbecoming possible. A large shawl generally woollen and very often dingy, covers them almost from head to foot, concealing every possible charm of figure under the long shapeless wrap, which is never put on coquettishly, as in France or drawn over the elbows, but allowed to hang in a straight line, the arms concealed under it—the hands only appearing now and then to huddle it about the neck. The feet are covered with white stockings (almost invariably clean) and shoes without any heels, in which it must be a work of extreme difficulty to shuffle about; and last, and worst of all, there seems to be a popular prejudice against combing the hair, which is generally abundant, and always uncovered, but which hangs about their brows in elf locks—a wild exaggeration of the fringe of modern fashion. This is all the greater misfortune that the hair itself is often beautiful, and that its wild condition does great wrong to a pretty little fresh countenance underneath, which does not possess the fine and picturesque outline which half justifies a picturesque disorder, but is of the class which requires and rewards tidiness and care. The occasional vision of a higher beauty here and there is not much more common in Venice than in other places. In Torcello, in the wild and melancholy desert which was once a lesser Venice, are one or two pale lovely young women of a higher type, and the lace girls of Burano, bending over their endless work, have a considerable amount of beauty among them.

A Belle's Toilet.

A human eye becoming detached from the person of the fashion reporter of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch it secured surreptitious entry into a West End boudoir, and so disposed itself that its visual angle was subtended by the bureau, the pier glass, the wardrobe, and the bed.

Then the eye waited.

Presently a vision of loveliness floated into the room. This was at 4:10 P. M. The vision was clothed in a calico wrapper, and its long, yellow hair lay damply matted along its back. There was not much effort to be beautiful in the vision, its prettiness being of the natural and unadorned order, suggestive of brown Windsor, Turkish towels, and cold water. When the vision sat down, it was evident that no silken or other hose was between the little pink heel and the kid slipper. No cuffs were on the wrists, and, indeed, the wrapper clung damply to shoulder and arm, and suggested all manner of thoughts to the eye—of naiads and the rolling surf and Bougureau's pictures. "My gracious goodness!" exclaimed the apparition; "its after 4 o'clock. I must hurry." It hurried thus: Taking a couple of good stiff brushes from the dressing-case, it disposed a towel about its shoulders, and brushed the yellow hair, and brushed and brushed, and brushed and brushed. The little toy-clock on the mantel ticked for the half hour, and then for three-quarters past 4, and still that tireless arm weaponed with the brush continued its task. While the eye had been mesmerized by the monotonous cadence of bristle upon bristle, and had been soothed into drowsiness that passed into sleep, an interval of which no note could be taken, and when the eye stared vigilantly into the room again a lightning-change act had occurred. Instead of the blue calico wrap, the form upon the chair was now incased in snowy dimity, with abbreviated, lace-edged skirt, the loose hair had been knotted into a figure eight, and the hands of the toy-clock pointed to ten minutes past 5. After so much exertion of course must come a rest, and the vision toyed with a manicule while the eye busied itself with a dimple on the vision's elbow and an inventory of the little toes, each armed as the Harolds say, with a little sea-shell nail. The vision finished its hands at 5:25 P. M., yawned and stretched languorously as though every detail of the toilet were being enjoyed, and then leaned sideways to an adjacent chair upon which hung pendant several pairs of stockings. A blue pair and a whitish-lace looking pair were closely inspected, the inspection consisting chiefly in patting the fabric stretched out over the instep. It took four minutes to decide this momentous question, which was finally adjudged in favor of the blue, and ten more to adjust the hosiery in situ. A half a dozen approbatory pats were bestowed upon the garments, and a little crease which insisted on appearing just over the toes was carefully smoothed out, then the vision went before the pier glass humming a strain from "The Chimes of Normandy," and taking the pose of Serpolette, passed judgement upon herself and found herself good. A pair of shoes next went on, an unsuccessful search for a shoe-buttoner ending in the use of a hair-pin, and the Paper Making from Bagasse.

A breeze has been made in paper manufacturing circles lately, more particularly at the South, by the appearance of a recent edition of the New Orleans Picayune printed on paper made of bagasse. This material is the refuse of the sugar cane after the juice has been squeezed out. Quite recently it has begun to be utilized in a small way for fuel, but it has previously been considered a worthless material and only a source of expense in carting it off to dumping grounds where it was burned.

Experiments to utilize bagasse in paper making have been considered for a long time, but it is not until very lately a New Orleans man—Mr. Harang—has made the claim of practically solving the problem. A lot of bagasse was shipped to a paper mill in Canada and 5,000 pounds of paper made. It was rather more brittle and darker than most newspaper but was, nevertheless serviceable paper material. Whether its production will pay is another question. Paper stock of all kinds, rags, wood pulp, jute butts, were never so low as now and the cost of paper making has been reduced by this course to such low figures that we have ceased to buy foreign paper, but instead export largely.

Ground wood pulp can doubtless be made cheaper than bagasse paper material, but enthusiasts believe there is a field for it. At least it would seem as though bagasse might be profitably used in the manufacture of tubs, barrels, dishes and such articles. An effort is being made to raise a working capital of $100,000 with which to erect a first-class pulp and paper mill.

The effort is a commendable one. It is possible that it may result in a new industry for the South of like nature as the cotton-seed oil manufacture. It is only a few years ago that thousands of tons of cotton seed were dumped into rivers to get it out of the way. The discovery of a process of obtaining oil from the cotton seed has built up an immense industry, which is to-day the leading manufacturing business of New Orleans.

A Battle with an Alligator.

A trapper and hunter, while trapping for otter on West Choctawpachie River, in Alabama, had a terrible fight with an alligator. Seeing the water agitated in a hole near the river, and supposing that otters were fishing therein, he mounted a pole on a tussock just about the water's edge. His steel traps were in a sack suspended from his neck. His only weapon was his hatchet. He sat on the pole with a mass of vines at his back, he held his weapon ready to strike an otter should one arise. Soon he saw a young alligator near him. He caught it up and it uttered a cry. In an instant there was a terrible splash of water, and a huge alligator with distended mouth and glittering teeth rushed for him. With little hope of escape he fell back upon the vines, and as he did so kicked the pole from under his feet. The terrible jaws closed on the pole and crushed it. Carroll tried to interpose the traps, but a vine had caught them and partly held him down. Seizing his hatchet he struck into the open mouth of his assailant. It closed on the weapon, and with great difficulty he sav-

A FEW PICKLES.

OLD VIRGINIA PICKLES.—Put up all the articles reserved for the pickle in a jar—tiny cucumbers, onions, cauliflowers cut in pieces, ears of young corn about an inch or two long, &c. Cover with boiling salt and water, allowing them to remain in it for forty-eight hours. Then take out of the water, place in a thick cloth, and expose to the sun to dry, turning them over occasionally. When thoroughly dry place them in a jar, cover with cold vinegar, to which has been added a small quantity of tumeric, to color them; let them stand in this for two weeks to drain out the water and plump them; then pour off this vinegar and add that made by the following recipe. In three months they will be fit for use.

VINEGAR FOR VIRGINIA PICKLE.—One pound each of gingea, celery seeds, horseradish and mustard seed; one ounce each of mace, nutmeg and of the long red peppers used in pickling. Put these spices into a stone jar or pot free from grease or anything that will impart an unpleasant odor to the vinegar; pour over them two gallons of strong vinegar; stir frequently, and allow to stand a year without using. After pouring off the vinegar for the pickles add more spices, and fill again for future use. Keep well covered. A superior pickle that repays time and expense of preparation, and will keep any length of time.

PICKLED LEMONS.—Cut the lemons in quarters, not entirely apart, and put a teaspoonful of salt in each one; put them where they will dry, either in the hot sun or by the stove; when they are so dried that they are black, and look good for nothing, prepare the vinegar with cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger root, onion and a little mustard seed, and pour it boiling hot over the lemons. Keep a year before using, when they will be found equal to the West India lime. They require more vinegar than other pickles, as the lemon swells to its natural size.

LEISURE HOUR PICKLES.—Take a jar with a close lid or bung, and half fill it with the best and strongest cider vinegar; then vegetables of all kind that come to hand, such as small beans, cauliflowers, radish pods, young cucumbers, onions, &c.; throw them in taking care always that there is sufficient vinegar to cover them. When nearly full add mustard seeds, bruised ginger, shallots, whole pepper, &c., to taste. Tie down tightly, and place the jar in a vessel of water over the stove until the articles are soft enough.

PICKLED CUCUMBERS.—The best cucumbers for pickling are not larger than a man's thumb, and should be fresh gathered. Put young cucumbers in a jar and cover them with a brine made one part salt to four of boiling water, pour hot over the cucumbers, cover and let stand for twenty-four hours, and to every six cucumbers put one small white onion in the hot brine; when you take the cucumbers from the brine wash them in cold water and vinegar, half and half; wipe dry in a soft towel and put them back in the jar; make a pickle of—to every quart of vinegar, two ounces of brown sugar, two sticks of cinnamon, two pieces of mace, six cloves, two teaspoonfuls of allspice, one of whole black pepper, one long pod of self good. A pair of shoes went on, an unsuccessful search for a shoe-buttoner ending in the use of a hair-pin, and the vision at 5:55 was complete as to her foundation. When the clock struck 6 she was in the middle of a heated controversy with a corset, which had to be taken off and tightened, taken off and loosened, taken off and tightened again before she was entirely suited. Following the corset came an avalanche of white skirt that flew balloon-like into position and then nestled lovingly, beginning its evening work at exactly 6:10 P. M.

The vision now began the serious work of the evening; it took a damp towel and dabbed its face and neck there withal, dried by pressure, not by rubbing and with a soft fluff of swansdown dusted the fair skin with powder—rather heavily the eye thought. Next the powder was rubbed off as carefully as it had been put on; the front hair was taken out of the papers in which it had been reposing, and a few careless passes of the comb clustered the yellow ringlets into a most artistic bang upon the fair forehead, all of which was accomplished at 6:30 P. M.

Another white skirt, this time of lawn, went over the pretty head and down the supple waist, where it was fastened adroitly and shaken two or three times until it hit just that golden mean between too near and too far, which the ideal skirt upon the ideal girl should occupy. Of course this was not done without constant reference to the glass, and one or two liftings of the lower edge so that the wearer might with judicial accuracy calculate the effect of a neat blue uphoistered ankle beneath that maze of white upon the masculine intellect. So the time passed until 6:50 P. M. Then the waist, also of diaphanous lawn, went on, the vision seeing to it that through its thin texture gleams from the pale, rosy shoulders and bosom should properly pass. Shrugs of the aforesaid shoulders and affectionate patting from the prettiest hands in St. Louis assisted in this process, bringing the day to 7:15 P. M. A collar of the minaret kind, and a haze of white lace went round the throat and were buttoned, pinned, and tied in ten minutes more. A bunch of artificial lilacs took five minutes to adjust, and the actual work of the toilet was done by 7:25 P. M., just three hours and fifteen minutes after it commenced. Ten minutes more, however, was devoted to criticism, the little form bending backward and forward before the pier glass into every possible position, studying the effect of the costume, which was, the eye thought, a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

She floated out of the room at 7:40 P. M., leaving the eye a wiser and a more wistful eye than it had been, and as it prepared to return to the body from which for nearly four hours it had been divorced, the eye moralized that those four hours had not been lost, and that, considering the time, the feminine result was superb.

ing his hatchet he struck into the open mouth of his assailant. It closed on the weapon, and with great difficulty he saved the hatchet. Getting free from his traps he dealt the alligator a fatal blow on the skull as it made the next charge. He secured the skull and such teeth as had not been destroyed in the fight. The length of the alligator was about 9½ feet. The hole was its den. Alligators rarely attack human beings.

The Wife

Ruskin, whose voice is that of a prophet, recalling men and women to those domestic ways in which pleasantness and peace are found, thus writes of the beautiful word "wife."

It is the great word in which the English and Latin languages conquered the French and Greek. I hope the French will some day get a word for it instead of femme.

But what do you think it comes from? The great value of the Saxon words is that they mean something. Wife means "weaver."

You must either be housewives or housemoths; remember that. In the deep sense you must either weave men's fortunes and embroider them, or feed upon and bring them to decay.

Wherever a true wife comes, home is always around her.

The stars may be overhead, the glow-worm in the night's cool grass may be the fire at her feet; but home is where she is, and for a noble woman it stretches far around her, better than houses ceiled with cedar or painted with vermilion—shedding its quiet for those who else are homeless.

This, I believe, is the woman's true place and power.

Catching a Cormorant.

Ned Monaghan, a Newark Bay fisherman, says he had a remarkable experience on the water on Sunday afternoon.

"I was having no sort of sport at all," he said, "and at about 5 o'clock in the evening I was lying half asleep in the stern of the boat, watching a lot of big black divers that were going under the water, catching lots of good fish and flying away with them. I had a long stretch of line out, but I was not thinking about it, when I got a bite that nearly pulled my wrist out of joint. I began to haul in the line, but it was no easy job, for the thing at the end of it was struggling like a shark. However, I had nearly got it all in, and I was watching for the head of a big fish to appear, when suddenly my line shot up out of the water and soared towards the clouds, carried by a diver that I had caught. It did not take him long to stretch it all out, now that he was on the wing. It broke off close to the reel, and the bird sailed away with the line streaming behind him. Cormorants, they are called, and a catch of one makes all the fishing you want for a day.—New York Sun.

of cinnamon, two pieces of mace, six cloves, two teaspoonsful of allspice, one of whole black pepper, one long pod of red pepper and a tablespoonful of mustard seed; let the vinegar boil for five minutes; pour the vinegar boiling hot over the cucumbers, and when perfectly cold tie up, and they will be fit to eat in a week.

A Sacred Tree.

In the East, the greatest veneration is paid to the Indian Ficus religiosa, the sacred and consecrated fig-tree or peepul-tree, of knowledge and wisdom. The holy Bo-tree of the lamas of Thibet. It is met with in most countries of South-eastern Asia; but the descriptions of it in botanical hand-books are confused and misleading. It is a handsome tree, growing frequently to a great height, an evergreen, which puts forth its flowers in April, and the bark yields freely upon incision an acrid milk containing a considerable proportion of india-rubber. According to Balfour, "the leaves are heart-shaped, long, pointed, and not unlike those of some poplars; and as the footstalks are long and slender, the leaves vibrate in the air like those of an aspen. It was under this tree that Gautama slept, and dreamed that his bed was the vast earth, and the Himalaya Mountains his pillow, while his left arm reached to the Eastern Ocean, his right to the Western Ocean, and his feet to the great South Seas." (Balfour's Cyclopædia of India.) This dream warned him that he was about to become a Buddha; and when its prophecy was fulfilled, he was again seated beneath the same tree.

In the year 250 B.C. a branch of this sacred tree was sent to the ancient city of Amuradhapoora, in the interior of Ceylon, together with the collar-bone of Gautama, and his begging-dish with other relics. Here it was planted, and was known by the name of the Bo-tree. The highest reverence was paid to it for two thousand years, and it is to this day the chief object of worship to the pilgrims who every year flock to the ruins of this city. These ruins are of vast extent, and abound in intricate and magnificent carvings. "An inclosure of three hundred and forty-five feet in length, and two hundred and sixteen in breadth, surrounds the court of the Bo-tree, designated by Buddhists the great, famous, and triumphant fig-tree." It is declared to be the same tree sprung from the branch sent by Asoka from Buddh-gya, and the amazing vigour and longevity of these trees make the assertion within the limits of the possible. "The city is in ruins," says Ferguson; "its great dagobas (sanctuaries containing relics) have fallen into decay; its monasteries have disappeared; but the great Bo-tree still flourishes, according to the legend: 'Ever green, never growing, or decreasing, but living on for ever for the delight and worship of mankind.' There is probably no older idol in the world, certainly none more venerated."

"Molly, I wish you would be a better little girl," said an Atsini father to his little daughter. "You have no idea how sorry I am, that mama has to scold you all the time." "Don't worry about it, pa," was the reply of the little angel; "I am not one of those sensitive children. Half the time I don't hear what she says."—Texas Sittings.

Sunken Treasures

The list of treasure lost in the sea would indeed be a long and melancholy one; instancing for example, the Madagascar, from Australia, which, in the days of the gold fever there, having on board the precious yellow dust in enormous quantity, was never heard of and left not even the faintest clue to speculation as to her fate. And in later years the Thunder steamer, from Calcutta to China, with some £300,000 worth of silver, destined never to reach the expectant consignees, was supposed to be lying abandoned among the awful sandbanks at the mouth of the Hooghly, but, in spite of many rumors, never to be seen there. These are instances, out of many, of treasures never heard of. The wreck of the Royal Charter steamer from Australia, lost in a frightful gale on the Anglesea coast in October, 1859, with some £800,000 of gold on board, will doubtless occur to the readers mind, coupled as it was with such a lamentable loss of life. In this case, happily, a great part of the treasure was recovered subsequently, but there is still a fortune left at Moelfra for the fortunate being who can find it. In old days Vico

A CITY OF PRETTY GIRLS.

The Way Steep Streets and Pure Air Contribute to the Beauty of Quebec Women.

"There are no homely girls in Quebec," a native-born Canadian said to a visitor to the ancient citidel city of Canada. "I have often stood at a window and watched for one in the throng passing on the sidewalks, but I have never yet seen a Quebec girl who could be described as ugly. I don't claim that they are all absolutely beautiful; but there is something in the clear, invigorating air, and perhaps in the soil and surroundings of this lofty and rocky city, that gives them sparkling eyes, brilliant complexions and elasticity of step. Montreal is full of pretty women, but Quebec can beat her in this respect. Have you noticed how easily our Quebec girls climb the steep city streets? When they are ascending a sidewalk that slopes upward at an apparent angle of 30°, they don't get out of breath, they don't stagger from one side of the walk to the other. They just go up as lightly and gracefully as any lady can walk across a parlor floor. You can't do it and keep pace with them unless you've been brought up here. They'd tire you out before you got half way from Breakneck steps to Dufferin Terrace. The exercise they get is partly the secret of their good looks.

"Then there's another thing that helps. They're out of doors half the time. On a pleasant evening the terrace, that broad plank promenade which stretches for a quarter of a mile along the top of the precipice under the brow of Cape Diamond, is crowded with them, strolling in pairs and groups, chatting, laughing, and perhaps flirting a little. You don't mind that, do you? No. Well, look what a pleasure ground it is. Two hundred feet above the waters of the St. Lawrence, and facing one of the very finest views in the world, as everybody admits, which extends from Point Levi down the river to Cape Tourment, and from the gorge of Montmorenci far back among the Laurentian Mountains. You can't blame us Quebecers for being proud of it. And there's where the Quebec girls breathe the pure air that puts roses in their cheeks and the snap into their eyes. Yes, sir; steep streets and plenty of fresh air, and, perhaps, the subtle influences of a world-famous landscape, form the chief secret of the beauty of our girls."

Superstitions of Gamblers.

A friend of mine, who years ago used to travel up and down the Mississippi river, said to me: "I have watched gambling on the Mississippi steamboats night after night, and I have had a pretty fair chance of observing some of the superstitions of the old-time gamblers. For instance, they do not believe that there is any great luck in any of the precious stones except diamonds. If you have noticed the professional gamblers, even of these days, you will see that he usually wears no other ornament except diamonds. I don't believe that you could hire a gambler to wear a sun opal. Opals of all kinds are supposed to bring bad luck, but a sun opal, in a gambler's estimation, brings the worst luck of all. I have yet to see a gambler with nerve enough to sit down to a game wearing a sun opal. Another thing,

A New Application of Electricity.

The applications of electricity are continually being added to, but we doubt if one more curious or characteristic of the age in which we live has been adopted than the lighting up of a battlefield after nightfall to clear it of the wounded, in order that they may be more readily and speedily succored than can be the case with the ordinary methods of search. Last year experiments were made with success at Vienna by Dr. Berau Mundy, and this year following the example at Vienna, experiments have been made at Aldershot. The National Society for aid to the Sick and Wounded in War provided the funds, and on the 24th July Dr. Baron Mundy himself with Surgeon H. R. O. Cross, A. M. D., and a large party of army medical experts made the experiments at Aldershot. A movable steam engine was drawn by a pair of horses to a position on the brow of Cambridge Hill, about a hundred yards in front of it was placed a stand on which were the dynamo, the lamp, and the apparatus for burning the light, connected by a cable with the engine in the rear. A battle had been supposed to have taken place whilst daylight lasted, and the wounded were scattered on the slopes and in the valley. These men the bearer column with the aid of the electric light were to find, dress their wounds and take them into the collecting station in the valley. The electric apparatus did not work so smoothly as was desirable, the light being very intermittent (this defect can no doubt be remedied by other lamps or carbons). When the light was on, the searchers could not possibly have missed a wounded man lying in the white light; there was abundance of light for dressing wounds. The whole of the imaginary battlefield was searched in sections, the light being turned on to the next station as soon as the one immediately preceeding it was cleared of the wounded. The experiments proved the success of the principle, but many details will require to be perfected before it can be considered absolutely successful. The next step that we may expect to hear of is the continuance of a battle after nightfall by the illumination from the electric light. These experiments show that there is still further scope for the electrical engineer.—Journal of Commerce.

How to Buy a Horse.

An old horseman says; "If you want to buy a horse, don't believe your own brother. Take no man's word for it. Your eye is your market. Don't buy a horse in harness. Unhitch him and take everything off but his halter, and lead him around. If he has a corn, or is stiff, or has any other failing you can see it. Let him go by himself a way, and if he staves right into anything you know he is blind. No matter how clear and bright his eyes are, he can't see any more than a bat. Back him, too. Some horses show their tricks in that way when they don't in any other. But, be as smart as you can, you'll get caught sometimes. Even an expert gets stuck. A horse may look ever so nice and go a great pace, and yet have fits. There isn't a man could tell it till something happens. Or he may have a weak back. happily, a great part of the treasure was recovered subsequently, but there is still a fortune left at Moelfra for the fortunate being who can find it. In old days Vigo Bay had always an attractive sound to treasure seekers, from the reported wealth on board the Spanish fleet destroyed there by Sir G. Rooke 1702; but the infinite pains, money, and patience extended over its recovery have been thrown away, the silver (even if it is there, which is somewhat doubtful) obstinately refusing to make a reappearance in the world.

Escaping From Brigands.

The circumstances under which the son of Consul Dussi, recently captured by brigands near Rodosto, Roumelia, was liberated without paying a ransom, are related as follows: The brigands were surrounded by a detachment of troops under orders not to attack until the young man should be in safety. Meanwhile the brigands had run short of provisions, especially of wine. M. Dussi, their captive, suggested that he should be allowed to write to his father to send a few bottles, which was readily assented to. M. Dussi accordingly wrote the letter, but, as none of the band could read, he proposed that a strong narcotic should be mixed with the wine, and that a sum of $500 and a free pardon should be promised to the messenger if he assisted him to escape. The plan was carried out. When the wine arrived the brigands eagerly partook of it, and were soon stupefied by the effects of the narcotic it contained. M. Dussi and his guide were thus enabled to get away and to reach the nearest village occupied by the gendarmes. The brigands were then easily taken prisoners by the troops under the command of General Mehemet Pacha. The member of the band who contributed to M. Dussi's escape has received the $500 promised to him, and will not be in any way molested by the authorities.—English Paper.

"Blind as a Bat."

"Blind as a bat" is an old saying so much the reverse of fact that it is not easy to explain how it ever obtained currency among people who had seen the animal. Nevertheless, bats are not dependent upon their eyesight for a means of getting about in the dark. They are able to fly with great speed and accuracy, to avoid obstacles, and to enter small holes without making the least mistake. Experiences have shown that this singular power of direction is due to a remarkable development of the sense of touch especially to be found in their great expanse of wing. Further, these animals possess large ears and curious nostrils, some of which are leaf-like formations of the most extraordinary description. The skin growths are all supposed to have reference to the skill with which the creatures wing their way in the darkest caves. Most bats feed on insects which they catch on the wing; some of them eat fruit, and a few enjoy a bad name because they suck the blood of other animals. Of the last are the so-called vampire bats, respecting which it used to be said that they fanned their victim with their wings while they sucked its lifeblood, but that part of the tale is altogether fabulous.

opal, in a gambler's estimation, brings the worst luck of all. I have yet to see a gambler with nerve enough to sit down to a game wearing a sun opal. Another thing, your professional gambler will never allow you to touch his chair when he is playing. In old times, when the stakes were high on the river boats, many a bloody quarrel has grown out of an infraction of this unwritten law. Usually a gambler will at once leave the game, and if he returns he will not play for large stakes. Now I will give you one more, which, perhaps, is the most universal rule among gamblers, even to this day. At midnight, the "old timer" will arise from the board and partake of a light lunch, and, perhaps, a little wine. When he resumes his seat you will observe that he has changed his hat. This is an unvarying rule. To sit through a game with the same hat on in the gambler's maxims considered little less foolish than giving his money away. Do all of the gamblers of to-day keep up the same superstitions? Some of them do, but they have no need to. There are very few games nowadays where a man is not certain to lose all he has if the gambler only wishes to take it. Within the past fifteen years I have not seen a game where cheating, more or less adroit, was not indulged in to trip the unwary."—Cor. Boston Traveller.

A Matter of Interest.

Peter Cooper was always a careful and prudent business man. He was strongly opposed to the methods of many merchants who launched out into many extravagant enterprises on borrowed money, for which they paid exorbitant rates of interest.

Once, while talking about a project with an acquaintance, the latter said he would have to borrow the money for six months, paying interest at the rate of three per centum per month.

"Why do you borrow for so short a time?" Mr. Cooper asked.

"Because the broker will not negotiate bills for longer."

"Well, if you wish," said Mr. Cooper, "I will discount your note at that rate for three years."

"Are you in earnest?" asked the would-be borrower.

"Certainly I am. I will discount your note for ten thousand dollars for three years at that rate. Will you do it?"

"Of course I will," said the merchant.

"Very well," said Mr. Cooper, "just sign this note for ten thousand dollars, payable in three years, and give me your check for eight hundred dollars, and the transaction is complete."

"But where is the money for me?" asked the astonished merchant.

"You don't get any money," was the reply. "Your interest for thirty-six months, at three per centum per month, amounts to one hundred and eight per centum or ten thousand eight hundred dollars; therefore your check for eight hundred dollars just makes us even."

The force of this practical illustration of the folly of paying such an exorbitant price for the use of money was such that the merchant determined never to borrow at such ruinous rates, and he frequently used to say that nothing could have so fully convinced him as this rather humorous proposal by Mr. Cooper.

fits. There isn't a man could tell it till something happens. Or he may have a weak back. Give him the whip and off he goes for a mile or two, then all of a sudden he stops in the road. After a rest he starts again, but he soon stops for good, and nothing but a derrick could move him.

The weak points of a horse can be better discovered while standing than while moving.

If he is sound, he will stand firmly and squarely on his limbs without moving any of them, the feet flatly upon the ground, with legs plump and naturally poised: or if the foot is lifted from the ground and the weight taken from it, disease may be suspected, or at least tenderness, which is a precursor of disease. If the horse stands with his feet spread apart, or straddles with his hind legs, there is a weakness in the loins, and the kidneys are disordered. Heavy pulling bends the knees. Bluish, milky cast eyes in horses indicate moon blindness or something else. A bad tempered horse keeps his ears thrown back. A kicking horse is apt to have scarred knees. A stumbling horse has blemished knees. When the skin is rough and harsh, and does not move easily to the touch, the horse is a heavy eater, and digestion is bad. Never buy a horse whose breathing organs are at all impaired. Place your ear at the side of the heart, and if a wheezing sound is heard it is an indication of trouble.—Rural Record.

The Architecture of South American Indians.

There is considerable variety in the shape and appearance of the houses made by South American Indians, even of the same tribe. In this village there were three different designs. First there was the open-sided shed which appeared to be used in common by the whole village for cooking purposes; then there were three rectangular buildings with roofs sloping nearly to the ground and sides made of split palm-leaves woven in and out between small poles, which were occupied by the larger portion of the villagers; and last of all was a large, round affair with a comical roof of palm thatch, and with plaited sides, which was occupied for sleeping purposes, but, singularly enough solely by the men. These last four houses were provided with narrow entrances, but were unlighted in any other way. Their floors were of Mother earth, trampled smooth and hard by many naked feet, and their roofs inside were shiny black from the soot and smoke which had accumulated there. Strung wherever space could be found were the small cotton hammocks of the Indians, and beneath each during the night burned a little fire to warm the naked body of the sleeper. In the rafters overhead, stretched from pole to pole, were the long straight bows and shiny yellow arrows of the warriors, and may be among the lot the deadly blow-pipe, or hanging from a peg, the paddle-shaped war club used by these people. Various earthenware utensils lay around, and the ingenious basket-work matapie, or cassava strainer, was never absent.

Truth—the open, bold, honest truth—is always the wisest, always the safest, for anyone in any and all circumstances.

The Napanee Express.

NAPANEE. FRIDAY, OCT. 3, 1884.

Three Months Free.

THE EXPRESS will be sent to new subscribers to 1st January, 1886, for one dollar. This is a very liberal offer. It places the paper within the reach of all. Send in names at once.

The pressure on our advertising space this week—in consequence of the approach of the fall show—compels us to hold over a large amount of editorial matter. The rush will be over in a couple of weeks and we will then be able to do justice to important matters of a political nature.

—The Standard thanks us for publishing its editorial "What Should be Done," but at the same time takes good care not to reproduce our comments thereon. To show that it has no claim to fairness in discussion it cuts out sentences of THE EXPRESS at random and then makes some silly remarks thereon which are supposed to be very smart. The Standard, as Dundreary would say, has a capacity for "making an ath of itself" unequalled by any modern journal that we know of.

—The local Tory organ denies the charge of THE EXPRESS that it defended corruption in Sir John Macdonald's election in 1882. We have not files of the Standard at hand to quote the exact language from, but everybody knows who reads that paper that it did defend the corruption then practiced by its friends. It is all very well for the organ now to challenge us to proof when it knows its issue is so small that one would require a search warrant to find a copy just after the edition is mailed, not to speak of one a year old.

—The Presidential fight is waxing warm across the lines. Cleveland's chances are in an equally lofty tone, and the people will be more than edified. Talk about mud-slinging! If this does not capture the bakery, what will?

ERNESTTOWN FALL SHOW.

The Ernesttown Agricultural Society held their annual exhibition in the drill shed, Odessa, on Saturday, 27th ult. Although the weather was a little leaky that did not deter an unusual number of exhibitors from getting their exhibits on the ground. A large crowd of ladies and gentlemen were in attendance which must be exceedingly gratifying to the management, demonstrating to an iota that the people are taking a keen interest in the welfare of the Society. The general features were excellent. On the track the tug of war was between "Legacy" and "Thunder," the former easily winning the trot and with it the special prize offered by Messrs. Sproule, Hunter and Switzer. Through the kindness of the Secretary we are enabled to append the following

LETTERS FROM KHARTOUM.

The Times' Correspondent Sends Extracts from his Diary.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The Times' Khartoum correspondent, April 28, reports that Gordon was laying mines in all directions. Food was dear. Gordon had issued paper money, the treasury being at Berber, and was paying the soldiers with it. The town was quiet. Half of the population joined the rebels previous to the beginning of the siege. No news had been received from the British government. Under date of July 30 the correspondent says the town was closely besieged for five months, and would be able to hold out only two months longer. Rations were being issued to the poor. The correspondent sends extracts from his diary in the course of which he says:—One Arab horseman suffices to frighten 200 of our men. On the day Saati Bey was killed, eight rebels charged 200 of our men, armed with Remington rifles, and dispersed them. The only men we are able to depend on are degreos. He states that Gordon is well.

across the lines. Cleveland's chances are beginning to look brighter. The scandal of his youthful days unearthed against him has been almost counterbalanced by one in which Blaine figures, and as Cleveland's public record is pure and his opponents badly smeared by the notorious Mulligan and Fisher letters, there is a prospect of the former being chosen. If it should result that Butler and St. John poll a sufficiently large vote so that neither Cleveland nor Blaine gets a majority of the whole electoral vote then Congress will elect the President, and as Congress has lately been Democratic, Cleveland's election would be almost certain. However, the 4th of November will decide the issue.

—It seems that the "minions of the law" are experiencing some difficulty in serving Mr. Hawley with the writ protesting his election, that gentleman being away from home. The Mail of Wednesday had the following in connection therewith.—

"Mr. Hawley's organ in Napanee recently proclaimed that that gentleman was ready—aye, ready—to face the protest against his election. He was said to be confident of success. He is displaying his anxiety in a somewhat remarkable manner. For three days a sheriff's bailiff has been after him for the purpose of serving him with a writ, but the nimble member has managed so far to elude him. He is a very active young man."

Mr. Hawley should feel flattered. For a Liberal M.P.P. to be called an "active young man" by the Mail is great praise. That journal usually speaks of Liberals as "bull pups," etc. We have no doubt Mr. Hawley will return home when it suits his convenience, and that the writ will be duly served. There is no law to compel him to remain home all year or put himself to any inconvenience to meet the behests of a sheriff's bailiff. Our Conservative friends should therefore keep cool. If they wish the trial to proceed they will have a full opportunity. Mr. Hawley, we know, has no fear of the result; if anything annoys him at all it is the knowledge of the expense and inconvenience he will be put to, no matter how the trial ends—and he is not a man who has either time or money to spare in litigation. He knows, as does everybody else, that the protest is merely a petty piece of persecution instigated for the purpose of driving him out of public life. But it will be unsuccessful. The trap set for him will yet catch the man who set it.

—The Beaver and Kingston News are just now exchanging courtesies. The Beaver calls the Kingston contemporary an "old dame," and the News retorts by dubbing the Beaver "a miserable straddle-the-fence and gossips' manual." It further says:—

"It [the Beaver] has mistaken its vocation. The braying of a jackass may appear supremely awe-inspiring to the inhabitants of Dundas-st., but we are afraid that they only afford a little harmless amusement to any one who has crossed the Napanee River. Length of ears is certainly a consideration in gossip-mongering, but the enunciation of the principles of statecraft require increase in another direction. Ignorance is not, so far as we are aware, a crime; it may not even be considered a fault in a gatherer-up-of-unconsidered trifles, but it has no place in journalism. This need not, however, cause the editor of the alleged paper in question any concern, as the imbecility of the few remarks which it does occasionally grind off, has not the remotest connection with the profession mentioned. We can only smile at his ludicrous attempts to slay not one thousand, but one, with the jaw-bone of an ass. What is bred in the bone will come out in the flesh, and the silly old Beaver will be the same silly old woman to the end of the chapter."

This is rather rough on our local contemporary, and we extend our sympathy. But the Beaver will, no doubt retort this week

A BURGLARIOUS ASSASSIN.

He Pulls out a Revolver and Shoots a Would-Be Capturer.

Considerable excitement was caused at Brockville on Sunday last by the report that a man had been shot at Bellamy's Station, nine miles from Brockville on the Canada Pacific Railway. The following are the facts of the case:—During Friday and Saturday burglaries have been perpetrated in the village of Irish Creek, on the C. P. R. Early on Sunday morning the burglars, three in number, entered the general store of Mr. C. Richards, of Irish Creek, but when they were alarmed by a boy sleeping in the store they took a hasty departure without securing any booty for their trouble. Mr. Richards, surmising that the burglars had gone towards Brockville, started in pursuit, taking eight men with him on a hand-car. When they arrived at Bellamy's Station at three o'clock Sunday afternoon they discovered three men sitting on the fence beside the railway. The hand-car was stopped and Richards asked where they were going, whereupon one of the men pulled a revolver and shot him through the face, the ball entering the cheek on the left side and after passing through his mouth and dislodging a number of teeth, passed through his right cheek. He was at once placed on the hand-car and brought to Brockville, and the alarm was given in the neighborhood where the affair occurred. The Chief of Police, accompanied by two officers and a number of men armed with revolvers and rifles, immediately started for the scene of the shooting, and hopes are entertained that the guilty parties will be captured. The wounded man is now lying at the St. Lawrence Hotel, Brockville, and it is expected that he may recover.

Age should always command respect, in the case of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry it certainly does, for 25 years that has been the standard remedy with the people, for cholera morbus, dysentery, diarrhoea, colic and all bowel complaints.

MANHOOD

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in his admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

THE MILLINERY OPENINGS.

Elaborate Display of Ladies' Head Wear.

The weather on Saturday was not favorable to a large attendance at the millinery openings, but notwithstanding large numbers of ladies visited the leading establishments and inspected the elaborate conceptions of modistes for their adornment. A drizzling rain continued all day and walking was anything but pleasant. Those who were in town, therefore, were driven to the refuge of the stores and the bright and beautiful displays therein furnished a striking contrast with the dreary state of things outside. Below we give brief descriptions of the displays of leading establishments:—

F. Slaven & Co.

Though this popular house did not announce a formal opening it was well known that a fine display of millinery would be made and hence there were many visitors. There was no attempt at decorations but the newest and most fashionable goods were shown in great profusion in every department. Interest however largely centred in the millinery department, over which Miss Shannon so efficiently presides. We give below the result of our representative's visit:—

In conversation with Miss Shannon as to the new styles and shapes we learned that this season the hats will have a tendency to roll, which makes them much more becoming. The much worn but still popular poke is still in vogue. The names of some of the other favorites are Argyle, Antique, Rubina, Primrose, Amaranth, Minnock and Maisie. The trimmings this season are unusually rich and beautiful, the knotted chenille velvets, Terras and Tinselled Ganaze being among the novelties. Fancy feathers, tips and plumes of every description are used in great profusion and ornaments of every shape and design are still in great demand.

Among the hats on exhibition was a very handsome pattern made of golden brown velvet. It was covered perfectly plain. The edge is formed of a net work of beads of the same shade about two inches in width. The trimming is rendered very effective by having the plume drooping over the left side and falling low on the hair. The front finished with an an Aigrette of golden tips to match the plume and large bow of very rich ribbon caught with jewelled spears.

Another very beautiful hat was of Mousse velvet with very large square crown, brim slightly rolling in front, the edge formed of a handsome trimming of misel and bronze chenille, two very large Mousse plumes twisted so as to form an elegant trimming in front, the tips of one falling off at left side, the right side of the hat being entirely plain. The plumes are fastened with a very pretty silver buckle and knot of velvet of same shade.

One bonnet in copper-colored velvet, especially caught the eye. It was in the Marie Stuart shape, the brim being made almost entirely of small gold bead, the inside of the brim having a full puffing of copper-colored satin and the trimming composed simply of beautiful large Argrette held in place by a large golden claw. The crown of the bonnet was dotted with small gold beads, ties to match bonnet in copper color and gold and caught with small bronze bugs.

We noticed an exceedingly pretty bonnet for a child in Coquelicot velvet, that bright shade being unusually becoming. The shape was called the Frow Frow and was trimmed very prettily with a twist of velvet and cluster of tips of same shade and shining through the tips was a beautiful gold butterfly.

There is in connection a well maintained dress-making department conducted by Miss Allison, who has a thorough knowledge of the business and leaves nothing undone to and gentlemen. The entire display was most creditable to the firm. It should be seen to be appreciated. It will be seen by advertisement elsewhere that the decorations will be kept up till to-morrow (Saturday) in order to give people from the country who were prevented by the rain of last Saturday from seeing the display, to witness it.

In the fur department this firm may be said to excel all others both in point of larger variety, rich goods and superior make and finish. They are just now in receipt of all their new stock for this season and their display is well worth going to see. We noticed some very rich Persian lamb coats for men as well as the fine prime North-Western coon coat which they have sold so largely other seasons. They also show for ladies fine seal, Persian lamb, Bokaren lamb and Astracan dog mantles. A large lot of fur lined circulars as well as muff bows and caps of seal, Persian lamb, Astracan, Bokaren, Mink, &c. Men's seal and Persian lamb caps and large lots of robes, in fact everything that is new, tasty, rich, warm and good and at prices in unison with the low figure of barley. They also show the packages of skins of same quality as that from which their furs are made and whenever desired are prepared to make up men's coats and ladies' mantles in first-class style and fit. The number of these garments which they have made up in the past three seasons is a sufficient guarantee of their ability in this line. We should say from the large stock they are now showing they intend to do the fur trade for these counties.

Downey & Co.

Up to a few years ago this firm marked their openings by gorgeous decorations throughout the whole establishment and the occasion was a fete day with the ladies, but for the past three or four years they have dispensed with all paraphernalia and left the goods to speak for themselves in the natural way. The result has been most satisfactory. The goods look in the store the same as when taken to the homes of the purchasers, and there are no complaints. Our representative took a walk through the various departments on Saturday, and the result of his observations is given below:—

In the Dress Goods Department the newest goods shown are, all wool Tricots, Bayadere Frise effects, with plain to match, for combination suits; Guillemmas, French Tuilles, Astrakhan checks, Repps, Bison Cloth. They have also a special importation of English mourning goods. The new colors for dress goods are Punch and Neapolitan Blues, Tobacco and Golden Browns, Russet and Huntsman's Greens, Pompeian Red, Powder, Wood, Ash Greys, etc. Special value in Silk Plushes, Plush Trimmings, and Plush Velveteens, which will be largely worn for suits and trimmings. Plain and Brocaded Frise in Silk and Satins, in Rhad-zimir, Sicilienne, Marveilleux. Duchess and Venetians will also be fashionable.

The Dress Making Department is under the efficient management of Miss Green, and is increasing in popularity, notwithstanding that this department has always occupied a leading position in the firm's business. All the latest fashion plates are shown.

In the Fancy Goods and Notions Department there are full lines in kid gloves, Jersey gloves, ladies' braided and plain Jerseys, ladies' and children's wool hoods and fascinators, tobogganing tuques, corsets, hosiery, rubber circulars, ladies' and children's lace collars, shawls, linen and silk handkerchiefs, mantle clasps, ornaments, etc.

In Mantle Cloths, they have Chevoit Checks, Sealettes, Persian Lamb, Jersey Webbing, Ottomans, Mattalaise, and Polar-ian, a new woolen stuff for jackets, ulsters, Hooper & Barber.

The millinery rooms of this new and enterprising firm were open on Saturday. In the main store a very choice display of all kinds of dry goods was made, while in the millinery department, which is under the management of Miss Wilson, a modiste of much taste and skill, an elegant show of hats and bonnets was made. The dress-making department, which is superintended by Miss Henderhan, was also a centre of interest and excellent work was shown. We append descriptions of a few of the many elegant hats and bonnets shown in the millinery room:—

Among the hats are the following:—A covered hat of moss green silk velvet, high tapering crown, straight rim, sloping at at back, an ostrich feather headed with bunch of tips, on side of crown a large shaded bird peeping from under tip, a large round double fan of velvet on left front extending a couple of inches above crown with a battle axe pin on each pleat. Another pretty conception was a high crown olive green felt hat, rolling rim, a deep band of cut silk velvet, band of silk velvet drawn loosely around the crown caught in antique loops with cone shaped gilt pins, a large ostrich aigrette on left front with short green plume falling gracefully over rim to back. A third was a cadet grey felt, medium crown, rolling rim, large in front, close at back, trimmed with three reversed pleatings of London smoke silk velvet, tips of the same color with a large aigrette of terracotta.

Among the bonnets was one in two shades of golden brown, a close V shaped crown, slightly flaring front of reversed pleats three in cluster with space between crown a darker shade three-quarters of a yard with crown to front, three groups at pleak with a space between, slanting down at back of crown—the fullness is divided and comes in pleats at each tie—made ties of velvet in large bow—a large shaded gold and brown plume twisted on top front.

New York Bonnets—Small square crowns of straw and made velvets—fancy gilt velvets in different designs—Chenille, Aigrettes, Antique, feather bonnets in amber brown Champignon and the different shades of Coquelicot; handsome flowers in all the new shades and designs. French bonnets trimmed very high in front; New York bonnets very flat. A very nice variety of crape bonnets in all the new shapes is also shown.

An Ex-Alderman Tried It.

Ex-Alderman Taylor of Toronto tried Hagyard's Yellow Oil for rheumatism. It cured him after all other remedies had failed.

A Sad Neglect.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill-health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"Brown's Household Panacea" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago, and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most assuredly quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea" being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle. 14-12-17.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest is a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting of teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, the business and leaves nothing undone to please her customers.

HINCH, PERRY & CO.

This firm, as usual, at considerable expense and labor, made a most magnificent display throughout their entire establishment. The window displays were elegantly dressed; the inside of the main store was carpeted and the long stretch of room was canopied by lace curtains. The right counter contained an elaborate display of silks and satins most tastefully arranged; the left counter was weighed down with tweeds, coatings, gents' furnishings, etc., while the rear counters contained ladies' haberdashery, fancy goods and a variety of articles which space will not permit of mentioning. The exquisite blending of rich draperies, beautiful flowers and bright colored ribbons rendered the millinery show room, which is located in the rear of the main store, the centre of attraction. The display in this department was unique in design, variety and richness of material and reflected the highest credit on the lady in charge, Mrs. Doxsee. In conversation with her we learned that among the leading shapes in bonnets for this season are the Marie Stuart, Leona, Ruby, Pearl, Langtry, and the Horse-Shoe is still worn. Our attention was drawn to one bonnet in particular, a French pattern called Marie Stuart. The brim comes to a point in front and is covered with chenille cord in two shades of green and the crown is covered plain with velvet of the same shade and is trimmed on the right side with folds of velvet caught down with two steel birds, and the left side is finished with a bunch of flowers in chenille of the same shade and ties to match.

Another bonnet, very much the same shape made in golden brown plush. The brim is made all in cords of plush, and is folded loosely from the point in the front over the crown, which forms the trimming and all, and a bunch of aigrettes and wings of the same shade near the front, ties of satin ribbon with raised velvet flowers caught at each side with gilt and steel pins in the shape of a claw.

A French pattern hat in bronze green felt called the Duchess has a high pointed crown and a narrow rolling brim turned up to a point in the front, trimmed with velvet and pins of the same shade and a cluster of tips and wings near the front, shaded from a bronze down to gold.

Another hat, high square crown. The brim turns up high on the left and slopes off to the crown on the right and covered plain in golden brown plush and trimmed with feathers and pom pons.

Among the leading shapes for hats are Primrose, Roslyn, Natalie, Warwick, Mascotte, Mother Hubbard, Abbie Anderson. Few flowers and those chiefly of Chenille will be used while large quantities of tips, aigrettes plumes, birds, wings, large pom pons, ornaments, pins, etc., are displayed, which, with plushes, Terry velvets and ribbons form the chief decorations and adornments. The new colors are Coquelicot, Mousse, Moiré, Ardoise, Coleus Fentre, Poudre and Tabac. In ribbons very rich effects are obtained by the new double face designs, the chief being combinations of plain velvet and satin, Terry velvet and Ottoman silk, Ottoman velvet and plain satin, Ottoman satin and Ottoman velvet, gold Ottoman cord satin and plain black satin.

The second flat was occupied entirely by a display of carpets and raw silk curtains. The carpets were suspended along the walls and covered the floor. They composed about seventy-five pieces in Velvet, Brussels and Tapestry, and for richness of design and quality were the finest ever displayed in town. A number of gentlemen's hats and caps were also shown here, besides an elaborate display of furs for both ladies and, a new wooden stur for jackets, usters, trimmings; it comes in smooth, curled, fleecy, piled surface, imitating the skins of the Persian Lamb in Iron Rust Browns, Dark Greens, Bronze and Black. The new Marabout trimming will largely take the place of fur, as it comes in all the new shades to match the goods.

In the Fur Department is shown a magnificent range of South Sea Seal, Persian Lamb, Otter, Coney-Alaska Mink, French and Persian Seal, Arctic Seal, in caps, capes, muffs, boas, etc., Astrachan, Bokharen, Persian Lamb and South Sea Seal mantles. Japanese goat robes in black, white and grey. An immense stock of staples is displayed.

The Millinery Department, presided over by Miss Phalen, contained an immense variety of hats and bonnets. A few are described herewith, together with some notes as to the new shapes and trimmings:—

"The Felicia," a golden brown French felt hat, high crown, broad rolling brim, slightly flaring towards the front, trimmed high to the left with alternate loops of golden brown Ottoman plush ribbon and pom-poms of the same shade, from which falls to the right an elegant golden brown ostrich plume.

"The Sombbrero"—An extremely stylish shape, becoming to almost any style of beauty—done in Powder Grey Plush, the crevassing of the brim alone showing artistic taste. Three Ash Grey plumes, held in position by a handsome cat's paw of same shade, constituted the trimming of one of the most elegant hats of the season.

"The Papellotte"—A Bronze soft French felt, a hat made expressly to be worn with the tailor made suit. The rim is plainly bound, and the crown, which is extremely high, is piquantly adorned by a fancy plume and bird, shading from a bronze to a Cresson Green.

Quite a variety of extremely stylish bonnets are shown, in all the new shades. One in particular attracted our attention, "The Onita," having a ground work of Pompeian red Silure, over which was drawn a network of red gold tinselette. The narrow brim was done in crevassed Pompeian plush; to the left were froullettes of embossed plush ribbon, finished with fancy Aigrette ties of the same material, held in position by miniature tiger's claws.

Children's capotes are shown in a variety of styles from the snug fitting Normandy cap to the becoming and comfortable Mother Hubbard and Fish-Wife.

Plumes and feathers, both plain and ornamental, will be worn in profusion. Bird's wings, aigrettes and fancy claws still hold precedence; any flowers worn will be of the most expensive French manufacture. Fancy ribbons will play a very prominent part in millinery this season. They come in all the new shades and the designs are really elegant.

French felts and the English fur felt, will find an opponent in the stylishly made, plush hat and bonnet.

The new shades which come to us this season are the Powder and Wood Ash Grey, Pompeian Reds, Cresson Green, and no longer are we sure of the exact shade of our fashionable and sedate brown. We have the color in endless deviations, tones and semi-tones, with a gradual blending from the old original brown, golden, sombre reddish, iron rust, to the coffee brown, with plenty of cream in it. Neapolitan blues and olive shades will also be very fashionable.

The tailoring department, under the efficient management of Mr. J. Walters, is as usual, at this season, crowded with orders. The stock this year is large and more varied than ever before. Among the new goods are Elysian naps for overcoatings, which be very fashionable this season.

the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 14-1 2-ly.

ANOTHER GRAND OPENING!

Owing to the unfavorable weather which prevailed last Saturday preventing numbers of people from witnessing our Grand Display, we have decided to hold

Another Grand Opening To-Day, Saturday,

THE WHOLE STORE WILL BE DECORATED THROUGHOUT.

The fair number of people who had the courage to face the storm last Saturday were delighted, and every one declared it the finest display we have ever made. The coming one will be still finer. As numbers of hats are sold Mrs. Doozee and her able staff will work early and late to provide delectation for the ladies in the shape of New Hats and Bonnets to look at.

We have received a lot of New Goods in Millinery, as well as new Ulsterings, Mantle Cloths and some fine Furs, all of which will be displayed on Saturday. A cordial invitation is therefore extended to all.

Our Stock in every department is the most complete, richest, best assorted and cheapest we have ever shown at Cheapside.

OUR TAILORING DEPARTMENT is full of orders.

OUR MILLINERY DEPARTMENT is more than busy:

OUR DRESS AND MANTLE-MAKING DEPARTMENT will be opened next week under the management of MRS. CLAPP, so long and favorably known to the ladies of Napanee and the surrounding counties. We GUARANTEE all work done by her to be satisfactory.

ULSTERS AND SEAL JACKETS.

All our Ulsters and Seal Jackets are cut, fitted and made by our Tailor, MR. MAX FOX, and we call the attention of the ladies to the superior fit and finish of our "Tailor Made" Ulsters and Jackets, and the advisability of having them made by a Tailor in preference to any dressmaker.

The choice stock we offer to any person wanting any of the above goods is not equalled anywhere.

THE COUNTY SHOW.

Look out for the big display of Furs in the Palace from CHEAPSIDE.

SIDNEY'S FOLLY

"Good-morning," said Sidney, giving him her hand with a little smile. "I forgot that you were going to hunt to-day. Where is the meet?"

"At Cotley Hall. I thought you would go with us."

"No," she answered, with a little shake of her pretty head, "I shall not hunt this winter. Are we late, I wonder? Stephen does not like to be kept waiting on these occasions, or indeed on any other," she added, with a laugh. "I do not know any one who does."

Stephen Daunt, also attired in hunting "pink" and faultless "tops," was in the dining-room, glancing over the morning papers, and Dolly, in a bewitching costume of seal-brown velvet, was hovering between the window and the table, and glancing impatiently at the clock now and again. At sight of Sidney she uttered a little exclamation of disappointment.

"Oh, Sidney, have you forgotten? We promised Lady Cotley we would drive over for the meet," she said eagerly; and Sidney looked over at her blankly.

"I had quite forgotten, dear," she answered hurriedly—"I really had quite forgotten."

Lloyd Milner was not so completely entranced by the charming little vision in brown velvet, with the pouting expression of disappointment on its fair face, but that he saw the cold conventional greeting which passed between Sidney and her husband—a greeting perfectly courteous, and yet as perfectly indifferent as if they were visitors at the same country-house, but had only a very slight acquaintance.

"It is the perfection of a hunting morning," Stephen said heartily, as Sidney walked to the head of the table, and began to make the tea. "You are favored, Milner."

"Yes, I was just saying to Mrs. Daunt that we had the proverbial southerly wind and cloudy sky," Milner returned, smiling. "You don't hunt, Miss Daunt?"

"No, I ride to the meet sometimes," Dolly answered; "but I hoped Sidney would drive me there to-day."

Sidney said nothing; her slim white fingers were moving deftly among the delicate old china and silver, and she seemed not to have heard. In reality she was wondering how she could surmount the difficulty which had suddenly arisen to hinder her going to Lymouth. She had utterly forgotten her promise to drive to Cotley; but, if Dolly did not go, she—Sidney—would have no opportunity of going alone to meet Frank.

"How did you sleep, Milner?" Stephen asked, as he threw aside the newspapers and came over to take his place at the table. "Well, I hope?"

"Tolerably well," said his friend, with a laugh. "Easthorpe is too new a residence to possess the distinction of a ghost, I presume?"

"I suppose so," Stephen answered carelessly. "Why do you ask?"

"Because, if it were not, I should say I heard one last night," was the reply.

"Mrs. Daunt, may I send you some of this omelet?"

"What do you mean, Mr. Milner?" said Dolly eagerly. "Did you hear any with a little unsteadiness in her low tones and with her eyes downcast. "But," she added in a moment, raising them suddenly and looking over at her guest with a glance of mingled entreaty and defiance, "I think Mr. Milner has drawn as largely upon his imagination as he is capable of going at one sitting."

"No, on my honor," the young man declared laughingly, "I am dealing solely with facts this morning, Mrs. Daunt."

"Are you?" she said coldly. "Then forgive me for being sceptical as to your supernatural visitors."

"You cannot be more sceptical than I am as to their connection with the spirit-world," he replied.

"Mr. Milner," put in Dolly impatiently, "pray be more explicit. I can keep my curiosity within bounds no longer."

There was a short silence. Stephen was glancing over his letters, and not paying much attention to the conversation between his sister and his friend. Sidney, her heart beating to suffocation, was dreading with a terrible dread what Milner might say next.

"It was a beautiful moonlit night," began Mr. Milner gravely, breaking the top off an egg, and speaking with great deliberation.

"Well?" Dolly said impatiently, as he paused. "You begin like the old song—"

"'Twas a beautiful night,
And the stars shone bright,
And the moon o'er the waters played."

"And, if you like, I will continue in the same manner," he said—

"When a cavalier
To a bower drew near
A lady he wooed."

Dolly laughed.

"La suite a demain," she said with a pout. "You are inventing as you go on."

"Not at all, I assure you. I am merely putting into poetical language what you are anxious to hear," he answered quietly.

"Do you mean that any cavalier was serenading a lady in this bower?"

"I mean just that," he said coolly, looking up suddenly and glancing from Dolly's eager, puzzled, smiling face to Sidney's, so pale and startled.

"What fun!" cried Dolly gaily. "How did he serenade? Had he a guitar? Whose window did he look at? I should think it was Lord de la Poer serenading you, Sidney!"

Sidney forced a smile to her pale lips; the suspense and uncertainty were almost more than she could bear. What had he seen? What had he heard? What was he going to say next? She felt ill and giddy in her terror, but struggled desperately against the feeling of faintness which increased every moment, and to which she dared not yield. If she were to swoon now, they would begin to suspect something, and this keen-eyed barrister's suspicions—for he suspected her undoubtedly—would become certainties. Her long sleepless night had made this more of an effort than her strength was quite equal to; but she gathered up all her courage, and, when she spoke, her voice was languidly sweet as usual, but very low.

"Serenading me! Is that likely, Dolly, when you are here?" she said. "Besides, the Earl has no instrument."

"Don't you think a drive would do you good, Sidney?" her husband said presently, throwing aside the newspaper that he had been reading. "You look very pale this morning."

"My head aches too much to go out," she answered petulantly. "But"—eagerly—"there is no need for Dolly to stay at home. I shall do very well alone."

Dolly made a feeble protest, her blue eyes denying her words.

"I shall be better alone," Sidney said eagerly, repenting of her eagerness the next moment when she discovered Lloyd Milner's eyes fixed upon her over his newspaper.

"But I am afraid Dolly is not to be trusted with your ponies, Sidney," said Stephen, glancing at his sister and smiling.

Sidney looked blank. She must have the ponies herself, to drive to Lymouth.

"No," she said dubiously; "but Lady Golightly will carry Dolly beautifully, and she would not be long changing her dress."

"Oh, that will be too delightful!" Dolly cried ecstatically. "Don't say 'No' Stephen. I promise I shall not want to follow. I will come home with the groom as soon as I have seen the meet."

"Of course, if Sidney likes to trust you with Lady Golightly, I am quite willing," the young man answered lightly. "Milner may take the responsibility of your care upon his shoulders, if he likes."

"Will you, Mr. Milner?" Dolly asked demurely. "I won't be a very great nuisance, I promise you."

"I think I can bear the infliction for once," was the grave answer, while the pleasant gray eyes frankly showed their delight at the proposal; and Dolly hastened away to put on her habit just as the horses were brought round.

Sidney breathed a sigh of relief; when once they were gone, she would be free for a few hours—and she had plenty of work before her. On looking into her purse that morning, she had found that her supply of money was very small, amounting to merely a few pounds, she must therefore go and cash a cheque before going to Lymouth. This would entail a drive into Ashford, which was the only difficulty—for Stephen's liberality had made his wife a rich woman, able to draw cheques without much fear of overdrawing her banking account. Of course it would require time, and she had not much between this and twelve o'clock. She glanced at the timepiece—it was nearly ten. The meet was at half-past ten; but Cotley was but three miles from Easthorpe.

"You are quite sure you will not be dull?" Dolly said, coming into the room, looking distractingly pretty in her dark blue habit and coquettish riding-hat. "It seems so selfish to leave you, Sidney."

"Not at all," Sidney answered, with almost feverish eagerness. "I shall enjoy being alone. And—and—Dolly, don't hurry back on my account. If—if you think you would like to go to Lambswold, pray do; I shall not be dull."

"You seem awfully anxious to get rid of me," pouted Dolly. "I believe you have some desperate design on hand, Madam Sidney."

Ah, how cruel the hot blood was that it rose so redly in her pale cheeks at Dolly's laughing heedless words! Sidney

"Miss Daunt, may I send you some of this omelet?"

"What do you mean, Mr. Milner?" said Dolly eagerly. "Did you hear any sounds in the house last night?"

"Yes," he replied smiling, glancing at the pretty eager face, "I heard soft swift footsteps and the rustling of a woman's gown along—"

A little clatter drowned the remainder of the words. Sidney had let the sugar-tongs fall from her unsteady fingers, and they had broken one of the fragile old china cups of the costly breakfast-service. Dolly, an ardent chinamaniac, looked dismayed.

"Oh, Sidney, what a pity! One of those lovely old cups!"

"It was very awkward," Sidney murmured with pale lips, looking far more startled than such a small catastrophe warranted, and uneasily conscious that Lloyd Milner's keen eyes were watching her with a keen scrutiny.

"It is not worth while getting so pale over it," Stephen said kindly, glancing at the little pale face. "It is a very small misfortune and easily repaired. Why, Sidney," he added, with a smile, "you look as frightened as if you had seen Milner's ghost!"

If Lloyd Milner had thought his young hostess pale before, he was startled now by the strange, almost ghastly pallor which spread over her face. What was its cause? he wondered. Had she an absurd dread of the supernatural, or—

"Tell us something more about your ghost, Mr. Milner," Dolly broke in gaily. "I shall be frightfully jealous if Stephen and Sidney set up a ghost here when we do not possess one at Lambwold. I have always been so sorry not to have a legend or something equally delicious associated with it."

"I am afraid the Easthorpe ghost will turn out something so very prosaic that you will not envy its possessors," said the barrister calmly, eating his breakfast, yet keenly observant of Sidney under his air of indifference.

"Prosaic? How can a ghost be prosaic?" asked Dolly, laughing. "How can soft swift footsteps and mysterious rustlings be prosaic?"

"Perhaps the term is misapplied," the young man answered, with a smile; "for surely there is nothing prosaic in midnight rendezvous given 'au clair de la lune.'"

He was looking at Dolly as he spoke, but his keen vision took in also Sidney's pale face and drooping figure.

"The plot thickens," Dolly said, laughing, and affecting to shudder. "To soft swift footsteps and mysterious rustling robes we have to add midnight and moonlight. Pray go on Mr. Milner; I am on thorns with curiosity."

"Do you find the position a pleasant one?" he asked, looking over at her with a smile.

"By no means. Release me from it," she pleaded, with a delicious little move.

"Dolly, what a chatterbox you are!" said Stephen, laughing. "Let Lloyd get his breakfast in peace."

"I will as soon as he relieves me from the agony of curiosity which prevents me from enjoying my own breakfast," she answered. "Come, Sidney, are you not curious also?"

"Devoured by curiosity," Sidney said, low.

"Serenading me! Is that likely, Dolly, when you are here?" she said. "Besides, the Earl plays no instrument, I think. Mr. Milner is the only friend we have able to serenade us."

"The serenading was poetical license," the young barrister interposed lightly. "My 'gay cavalier' did not serenade. He waited silently for his lady to appear."

"And did she come?"

"Yes, at last," he answered, smiling. "She was not very punctual; but he was patient, and his patience was rewarded."

"Did you see her?" asked Dolly eagerly.

"Oh, yes!" he answered. "Did I not tell you that the moon was shining? But, however charming her silver light may be for legitimate love rambles, it is not equally desirable for stolen interviews."

"This is becoming interesting," said Miss Daunt, smiling. "Stephen do you hear?"

Stephen glanced up from his letter abstractedly.

"I hear a great deal of chatter," he answered, smiling. "What is it all about?"

"Do you allow lovers' meetings in your grounds at midnight?" she asked demurely. "Because Mr. Milner was the reluctant witness of one last night."

"What does this madcap mean?" Stephen inquired, turning to his friend. "Is she talking nonsense? Did you see anything unusual in the grounds last night?"

"Something very unusual," was the laughing reply. Then Milner's tone changed to one of swift alarm. "Mrs. Daunt, is anything the matter? Are you ill?"

Three pairs of startled inquiring eyes went swiftly to the head of the table. Sidney had risen, and was supporting herself by one hand upon the table and the other on the back of the chair from which she had risen. She was pale to ghastliness, her eyes were half closed, and she seemed on the point of fainting. In an instant Stephen was by her side, but with almost equal rapidity she rallied.

"It is nothing—noting," she declared, forcing a smile. "It is so close this morning that the heat made me feel faint. I am sorry to have startled you, Stephen," she added tremulously, her little fingers closing involuntarily over the strong hand which held hers; "but it is nothing. Indeed I am quite myself now."

She resumed her seat at the table, trying to ignore her husband's anxious eyes, and those other inquiring eyes which were so much more unpleasant to meet and so much more difficult to avoid, and waited tremulously for the conversation to continue; but her sudden illness had been effective in silencing it, and when her companions spoke again, they had changed the subject.

Breakfast was over at last; the two young men had left the table, and were glancing over separate sheets of the local newspapers; Dolly, in her seal brown gown, was looking out of the window with a wistful look in her pretty blue eyes. In Sidney's troubled brain the thought was how she was to get to Lymouth alone and unseen. She must be doubly cautious now. Ah, why had such a cruel fate brought Lloyd Milner to Easthorpe at this juncture?

Madam Sidney."

Ah, how cruel the hot blood was that it rose so redly in her pale cheeks at Dolly's laughing heedless words! Sidney glanced nervously at Mr. Milner; but he was settling Dolly's habit, and did not see the hot vivid blush, or Sidney thought he did not, as she watched them ride away, the slender girlish figure between the two red-coated ones, leaving her free to keep her promise to Frank Greville—a promise which was to cost her very dear. Hardly had the horses disappeared down the avenue than she had rung the bell, ordered her pony carriage to be brought round with as little delay as possible, and was donning her outdoor attire with nervous little fingers which almost defeated their own haste, uneasily haunted the while by the strangely questioning, meaning look in Lloyd Milner's gray eyes. What had he seen? What did he suspect?

Sidney would have started on her mission with yet more trepidation if those questions had been truly answered, and if she could have known the result of that morning's ride.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I'm awfully sorry I said anything about the nocturnal apparition," Lloyd Milner said confidentially to Dolly, as they rode side by side behind Stephen in a lane which was a short cut to Cotley, and which was too narrow to allow them to ride three abreast.

"Why?" asked the girl, looking upher some surprise from under the brim of the dainty riding-hat.

"I am afraid I alarmed Mrs. Daunt," he answered.

"Oh, dear, no! Sidney is not so absurdly nervous," remarked Dolly confidently, with a smile of superior knowledge. "You do not really mean that you think that made her ill this morning?"

"I fancied so."

"Oh, then you are quite mistaken!" declared Miss Daunt, nodding her wise golden head. "She does not seem very well, I think," she added, in a minute. "There has been so much visiting and going about lately that she is tired out, I dare say; and the winter always tries Sidney."

"She does not look very strong," remarked Mr. Milner.

"Oh, she is strong enough! She rarely has anything the matter with her. Stephen," she added, raising her voice as she addressed her brother, "that is not the way to Cotley. What are you thinking of?"

Stephen laughed carelessly as he turned his horse's head in another direction, and the color rose slightly in his brown cheek. He had lost himself in reverie, half bitter and half pleasant, the pleasantness being in the thought of what might have been, the bitterness in the thought of what really was. If Sidney had loved him, how happy, how nearly approaching perfection, their lives might have been! But she did not love him, and it was all a failure.

When he married her, he had hoped that by patient endeavor and tenderness and love he would win what love she had kept from the wreck of her first love-affair, he had believed that she was learning to forget Frank Greville; but on his wedding-day this belief had been torn from him, and he possessed instead—or thought he possessed—the certainty that she still believed in, still loved Frank, who, he felt was guilty of the hideous crime of which he was accused. Had he not held such a belief, he would have left no stone unturned to prove the innocence of the man whom Sidney loved, even had that innocence parted her from him—Stephen—for ever. He loved her well enough, he told himself again and again, to have made her happy at any cost. But believing as he did, he had forbidden his wife, out of very pity for her, to make any efforts to prove Frank's innocence. A close inquiry into the matter would probably only result in overwhelming proofs of his guilt; and it was better, he thought sadly, for Sidney to mourn for her lost lover and his hard fate than to know that he was unworthy either of her love or of her sorrow. There can be no greater suffering, he knew, than to know the unworthiness of one we love. This, then, was the true reason of the severe and decided prohibition which Sidney resented so bitterly, and which stood between the husband and wife like an iron wall which neither could break down, and which gave color to the terrible suspicions which were about to be implanted in the young wife's heart and almost to shipwreck her whole life.

"I wonder Mrs. Daunt does not hunt!" remarked Lloyd Milner, when they were riding abreast again.

"This is stiff country, you know," Stephen said carelessly. "Sidney is a very good horsewoman; but I am glad she does not care for hunting."

"Has she ever tried it?"

"Yes, once." Stephen said briefly, recalling the occasion with a keen pang of pain, remembering all that had taken place since then, and how in the dusk of the wintry evening he and Frank Greville had ridden up the street together and seen Sidney's slight girlish form in the window of the firelit room in the Gray House.

"Did she come to grief that she has not repeated the experiment?"

"No."

"Then I am surprised she did not do so. It is becoming so very general for ladies to hunt."

"Yes, more's the pity!" Stephen answered carelessly. "In my opinion, women are out of place in the hunting-field."

"That's an exploded notion, mon cher."

"I know that. May I ask if you intend Mrs. Milner to hunt?" Daunt inquired, laughing.

The color rose in the young barrister's cheek.

"Mrs. Milner—if ever there be such a person," he said laughingly—"will not have the chance. She will not be able to afford it."

"Nonsense! We know what big fees Q.C.'s get."

"No doubt. But Q.C.'s are few and far between."

"Here is Cötley," said Dolly, who had been silent for some minutes, and whose cheeks were very pink—possibly from the exercise. "Is it not a charming old house, Mr. Milner?"

"A fine place, decidedly," answered the young man, looking at the rose-hued cheeks with more interest than at the

The Moroccan Army.

The army of Morocco numbers several thousand soldiers, commanded by nearly as many generals and officers. The Tunisian arm seems to have served as the standard for the organization of the Moorish forces, for a more comic mixture of soldiers can not be found in any modern opera bouffe. There are infantry, cavalry, and artillery, but without any distinction. The cavalry is permitted to ride on horseback whenever the Sultan furnishes the horses from his own stables. The artillery was established in 1862, when Sultan Mohammed received from the Spanish Government some old cannons. Four of these are still on wheels, to the great surprise of those who know the condition of the streets and roads in the Moorish capital. The uniform, if such there be, resembles the uniform of an English soldier. A quantity of old red jackets of the Gibraltar garrison were sold on one occasion to the Moorish Government. The headwear is a fez, a turban, or a capot. The army wears slippers instead of shoes. The arms are old guns with crooked bayonets, and a few swords, lances and pistols. The soldiers are of all ages, boys of 9 or 10 years old and men with gray beards. There is no regular conscription, no limitation of service, and no systematic promotion. Boys unable to read or write become officers, even colonels, though the influence of some eunuch or harem beauty. Many soldiers of comparatively superior intelligence have served for twenty or thirty years without promotion in the ranks with black Soudan negroes, Bedouins and Berbers of all colors and shades. In addition to the so-called regular army there is the black body guard of the Sultan, composed of Herculean negro slaves, and some sort of militia, called to service in case of war. The multi-colored crowd of soldiers present a ridiculous aspect but they are a most formidable foe in wars against Christians. It is neither the drilling nor the capacity of the officers which makes them so respected by the French and Spanish armies. It is their fanatical hatred and personal bravery, not to say fury. When children they are taught by their parents and Koran teachers to hate the Christians. The Moors have lost all tradition of their glorious achievements in science and arts, but they have not lost sight of the more realistic side of their past, of having possessed Spain and the entire coast of the Mediterranean Sea and her islands. Many Moorish families, although greatly mixed with the Berber and nomadic tribes of the south, bear still the proud name of some Spanish castle or city. They preserve through generations their ancient family documents, written on parchment, and even the keys to their residences in Spain, and they indulge in the hope of regaining possession of what they have lost. These thoughts inspire the Moors when fighting the Christians. They will fight and die, but will not be taken prisoners.—N. Y. Sun.

AGRICULTURAL.

The Horse for the Farm, and the Importance of Proper Training.

RURAL NEW YORKER PRIZE ESSAY

No other animal that man has domesticated, is capable of such varied and surpassing excellence as the horse. We breed and train him with special reference to speed, making him realize thousands and tens of thousands of dollars for his owner; or we breed draft horses, large and powerful; but neither of these compares in its importance with the farm horse, and if the latter is bred as carefully with reference to those qualities most valuable to the farmer, we may as surely accomplish the results desired in the farm horse as in the racer or draft horse. The fact that the United States has 11,000,000 horses shows that this branch of husbandry is of national importance, and that special attention should be given to increasing the commercial value as well as the efficiency of the horse.

The welfare of the farmer requires a horse equally adapted to the farm and road. He wants a horse of more strength and better qualities than the average of those he now has. The perfect horse for the farm and road is one possessing those combined qualities, which render him valuable for whatever duty he is required to perform, whether in the field or on the road; and this horse is the one that is docile, of good temper, quick and easily managed, with steady nerve added to strength and endurance. Good-natured, docile animals are always the best workers; the fractious horse worries more under restraint or guidance, is more liable to be abused by his driver, and consequently cannot thrive as well.

Let the farmers get sound, good-blooded colts and then make them, by training, just what they want them to be; for no animal is more susceptible to teaching than the horse, and none more ready to respond to kindness by willing obedient service. The colt is not naturally ill-tempered, and if it becomes so blame is due to some one who has handled it.

Rapid walking increases greatly the value of farm horses, and this is largely the result of training. So long have our farmers been negligent and careless in the cultivation of those qualities they most need in the horse for farm and road, that they must be educated up to their own best interests before we shall attain excellence in this direction. This will soon be accomplished when our agricultural societies and journals and Farmers' Institutes, take up the subject in earnest and persistently. In Massachusetts and a few other States an example has been set, which it would be well if all the States would imitate. It is confidently predicted that the Norman-Percheron, already a favorite in the West for farm and road, will prove equally so in New England, combining, as it does, desirable size, stamina, and all the better qualities of temper and action.

Latent Power of Manure.

Sir J. B. Lawes says, in the North British Agriculturist, that it does not follow, as a matter of course, that although the application of a manure has produced no effect upon the growing crop, it may not prove effective at some future time.

the young man, looking at the rose-hued cheeks with more interest than at the big red-brick house which rose above the trees of the park. "We are in good time, Daunt."

"Yes; the meet is in a field to our right."

Girls than Ours.

The notion that girls are too delicate to be useful is limited to a comparatively small part of the globe. Throughout Asia, Africa, and in large portions even of Europe and America, there prevails an old belief that they are born to labor. In Turkestan and on the Tartar steppes, the Kirghese sultanas and their daughters, and princesses in whose veins flow the blood of long lines of kings, still milk the cows and goats, and perform the menial offices of the household, as the Sanscrit maidens did six thousand years ago in the same localities. They cook, take care of the younger children, make garments, cure the skins of the wild fowl, with the feathers on, for caps, spin cotton, weave cloth, and tan leather by means of sour milk. In this delectable region the mother wears rich attire, while the daughter goes in humbler weeds, like Cinderella. If there is a piano, the mother plays on it in the front room of the tent, while the daughter brews the koumiss, stews the mutton, and broils the camel chops in the back kitchen. This is the benighted condition of patriarchal people who adhere to a nearly obsolete theory of filial duty. Similar ideas prevail throughout India, China, and among the native tribes of Siberia, who have been driven northward by aggressive neighbors. The Tungusian girl gathers the snow, melts it, makes the tea and the fish soup, sews, and, being skillful in archery, helps to keep the larder supplied with game. The Yakut and Samovede maidens, and all who dwell along the Arctic ocean, help in summer to lay up winter supplies, and in winter to perform all necessary domestic duties. The Abyssinian girl grinds corn in the simple mills in use in that country. The Kafir girl weaves baskets and draws water. The girls in the other part of the dark continent pulverize the grain, weave mats, make earthen vessels, and are the hatters of their tribe. The theories of the tribes and nations of Asia and Africa are shared by the Indians of North and South America, who compel the young girls to learn the duties and hardships of life at an early age.

A woman's reason: "Man more constant than woman! Oh, no, Sir Peter. Look at my husband! In all things he puts his sister before his wife! Look at my brother! In all things he puts his wife before his sister! When in both cases it ought to be exactly the reverse! Now, did you ever hear anything so absurdly contradictory in all your life?" Sir Peter wisely gives in.

SCALDS AND BURNS.—Thrust the injured part immediately into cold water; this protects it from the oxygen of the air; then cover the burn with soda or with wheat flour. If severe the patient should live on tea and toast and ripe fruits.

Take a common lamp chimney—one that is flaring at the top and finished with scallops or points will make the prettiest vase—and rub it over with mucilage or "stickalive." Then take some white zephir worsted and begin at the bottom of the chimney and wind it closely around the whole of the glass. Dissolve three pounds of alum in hot water, only enough to melt the alum. Put the chimney into a tin pail a little higher (an inch or two will do) than the chimney and turn the solution of alum all over it, wetting it slowly, and filling the pail even full. Let it stand all night. In the morning lift out the vase carefully and let it dry. The alum will not break off easily, and the vase will have a bottom formed by the crystals and it will look like a piece of rock candy. If you wind the glass with Zephyr it will give a rosy shade to the crystals. If with blue they will take that shade. A wooden cross, or an anchor can be wound with worsted and dipped in strong alum water in the same way and made very ornamental for a corner bracket.

HOW TO MAKE A MANTEL VALANCE.—Very elegant mantle valances or lampre-quins can be made of crazy or mosaic patch work. Cut a strip of Canton flannel the length of the mantle, and sew the bits of velvet, silks, satins, brocades, etc., upon it to the depth of five or six inches. A very pretty way to brighten up dark pieces of silk is to paint a spray of flowers upon them or transfer embroiders of butterflies, flowers, fans or the like. Or better still, embroidery sprigs of forget-me-nots, pansies, snowdrops, rosebuds or any pretty flower mosaic upon the thicker cotton; lining will give it more substance, and it can then be lined with surah-silk or satin, and trimmed with a deep band of crimson, or old gold, peacock blue, or green plush running across the bottom for a border. Then sew upon that many little pomphone tassels of every imaginable hue, and you will have a beautiful valance for your mantel-piece, which will prove highly decorative. It can be nailed upon a board covered with decorative felt or plush, or it can be hung on a tiny brass pole, with gilt rings in imitation of the fashion of hanging portieres, and draperies for the windows. Similar lambrequins can be made for corner brackets and by using very small pieces of silk, and many of them of velvet and plush, the effect is very pleasing.

How Many Ties to 100 Feet?

The number of cross-ties in a mile of railway track varies largely in different roads. Every first class line has at least 2,640, or one every two feet, and some exceed 3,200 per mile. Then, again, there is a difference on different parts of the same road. A tie, to grade, must present a clear surface of eight inches and a thickness of six inches. Sometimes ties below grade are used and the difference balanced by increased numbers.

To look back to antiquity is one thing to go back to it another. If we look back to it it should be as those who are running a race, only to press forward the faster, and to leave the beaten still further behind.

The application of a manure has produced no effect upon the growing crop, it may not prove effective at some future time. Years afterwards when perhaps all recollection of the application has passed away, or possibly when the farm has passed into other hands, some unaccountable luxuriance on certain portions of a field may indicate the burial ground of a manure which was supposed to have failed. In one of his experiments at Rothamsted, in the year 1844, about two-thirds of an acre of land was manured with a considerable amount of potash and phosphate of lime. The crop was wheat, and the produce was 15½ bushels per acre. As the land which received no manure whatever yielded a crop of 15 bushels per acre, it was evident that the manure had practically failed. In the following year salts of ammonia were applied, and the produce was 37½ bushels per acre.

Our cousins across the border in Ontario, Canada are bestirring themselves in good time for the conservation of their timber. In that Province the total area of timber land runs up to 130,000,000 acres. Of this only about 10,000,000 have been partially cleared; yet there is a bill now before the Canadian Parliament for the encouragement of tree planting, offering a bonus of not over 25 cents for each of certain specified species planted along a highway or a farm boundary line, or within six feet of such line. The trees along the highways are to be the property of the owners of the land, but they must not be removed without permission from the authorities. There are some things which even we Americans can learn from our neighbors.—Rural New Yorker.

Swallows and Cholera.

It has been stated again and again that swallows desert a district infected with cholera. The cholera correspondent of the Times says that "it is certain that there are none just now in Marseilles." Biologists appear to have hitherto regarded the statement as a popular fancy, but I think it worthy of better treatment. The idea that the bird has a mysterious instinct by which it divines the evil and avoids it is, of course, absurd; but there may be other very good and practical reasons, from a swallow's point of view, for leaving anyplace where the virus abounds. We know that swallows feed chiefly on gnats, and also that by far the longest period of gnat life is spent in the water. The gnat is a winged air-wandering creature only during the last brief breeding state of its existence. During all its growing life it is an aquatic animal: the egg floats on the surface of the water; the pupa is a twisting, jerking, jointed, worm-like creature, living and feeding in the water, though breathing air through a tube, which it thrusts above the surface; the big headed, wriggling, tufted larva lives in a like manner, and elaborates within it the winged creature that merely merges to perform parental duties in air and die. As cholera is propagated by polluted water, there is nothing unreasonable in supposing that such pollution is inimical to gnat life, and if so, the disappearance of the swallows is at once explained. They naturally desert the place from which their food supplies are cut off.—The Gentleman's Magazine.

FASHION NOTES.

Very odd is the notion of a seaside hat, the Neptune, the fancy of a Paris milliner. It is a large capote of gray-green rushes, burdened around the brim with gray-green plush, and on one side an aquatic miniature landscape composed of water-plants and sea weeds, a pretty pink-lined shell, and a small green frog dressed in green velvet and pale yellow silk, with great melancholy eyes looking at you through the rushes.

Embroidered bretelles, or, prettily still, those made of lace and net, wide on the shoulders and tapering to a point at the belt, front and back, over the bodice, are again in vogue. These graceful additions are always becoming, relieving as they do the severity of a plain waist. Bodices of opaque white, in cashmere, nun's veiling, or even silk, are never pretty at the back unless the blank outlines are softened by some such accessory. Lace berthes and fichus, so long worn, are now giving place to bretelles, which are still more chic and graceful.

There will be a rage this season for the small French capote bonnet made of black velvet, black satin covered with escurial or beaded Spanish lace, and not a few of fine French felt in all the new deep, rich shades to match the costume. Wall flowers, nasturtiums, or shaded geranium blossoms, each made of silk velvet, are set in large clusters on one side of the crown. Upon some very stylish looking gypsy hats of the darkest green velvet are connects of orange colored nasturtiums, mingled with sprays of pale-green maiden-hair fern.

The display of wash materials is unusually large this season, and the fabrics and colorings were never more beautiful. Paler shades are more noticeable than formerly, and in fabrics of chambery, gingham, parcale, sateen, organdie, and French muslin, the new dyes rival the tintings of the most delicate silks and satins. Especially blue, dove-gray, corn, and pink. The sateens, with their brilliant gloss, when stylishly made up and trimmed with edgings of fine Torchon lace, look quite as rich as silk. They wash admirably, and with little care will last two seasons.

Some of the newest bridal dresses of white satin have the trains garnished with an embroidery of white velvet ribbon work and white chenille appliques in heavy raised designs about six inches wide, which border the entire train. In front, the tablier literally disappears under a network of chenille flowers, waves of lace, and dainty wreaths and clusters in ribbon work, deftly and beautifully intermingled. One magnificent dress of milk-white Ture satin is decorated with a marvelous embroidery in chenille of golden rosebuds and pale plush roses. Another of cream-white satin, has the train and petticoat garnished with Marguerites in chenille pale-blue forget-me-nots in raised silk embroidery.

The magpie fashion of wearing a mixture of black and white which has been in such vogue for two seasons past seems likely to remain a fashionable color combination even long after the conditions of "court mourning" have been fulfilled. A

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

Wash and scrape, boil until tender, cut into quarters of convenient length, and cover with vinegar. It is the best way to prepare carrots for the table.

MILK TOAST.—A good way to dispose of dry bread is to make it into milk toast. It is very popular with the working men and children, and often solves the problem that disturbs the cook when she is thinking what is to be got for supper. Toast the bread a short time before it is wanted. Set a half pan of milk on the stove and let it get scalding hot. Put in a little salt, spread the toasted slices with butter and put them into the hot milk, and in a very few minutes remove to the table. If the toast is put in too soon, the bread will fall in pieces and is not so nice to serve. There should be plenty of milk for the amount of bread.

BREAD PUDDING.—A pudding may be made of the small pieces of bread, if the family taste does not rebel. The bread should be broken fine, covered with milk, and set on the stove where it is not too hot, until it becomes soft. Remove and stir in a tablespoonful of sugar, one of butter, a small teaspoonful of salt, also a pinch of cinnamon, or allspice, and, if liked, a half teacup of chopped raisins, or dried raspberries. When cool enough, stir in a egg, well beaten, and bake an hour in a moderate oven. To be eaten with cream and sugar, or pudding sauce, as preferred. I knew a lady who kept all the broken pieces of bread in a bag, that was hung where they would dry and not mold, and she had the material for a pudding always at hand. The price of flour and cost of living would determine whether such economies would pay. Where wheat is a dollar a bushel, home raised, there is no waste in giving broken pieces to the fowls. But it is often a convenience, as well as a duty, to look after small savings.

QUINCE MARMALADE.—Pare, core, slice, and weigh the fruit, stewing the skins and cores, in a dish by themselves, with water enough to just cover. When the parings are tender, turn into a cloth bag, and squeeze out every drop of juice; put the quinces into the kettle, pour over the juice, cover, and let cook slowly, stirring and mashing with a wooden spoon until the pieces have become a smooth paste. Now add three-quarters of a pound of white sugar to each pound of the fruit, boil ten minutes longer, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire, turn into jelly-jars and tie down.

RIPE TOMATO PRESERVES.—Select the yellow egg tomato, peel and weigh out seven pounds, add six pounds of sugar and let stand over-night. Drain off the syrup, let boil, skinning carefully. Put in the tomatoes and boil 20 minutes. Take out the fruit with a skimmer and put into jars, boil the syrup until it thickens, adding the juice of three lemons just before you pour it over the fruit. Seal or tie up.

SWEET PICKLED TOMATOES.—Select the huck, or strawberry tomato. Take seven pounds of the fruit, four pounds of white sugar, a pint of good cider vinegar, mace, cinnamon and cloves tied up in a bag. Pick the fruit, and put with the sugar into a preserving kettle; heat to a boil, add the vinegar and spice, boil five minutes,

The Woman Question in Europe.

A book of no common interest as a record of social progress has recently appeared under the title of "The Woman Question in Europe." It consists of original essays by writers who are authorities on the special subjects of which they treat. The topics embraced under the general title include woman's progress in education, in the professions, in industrial opportunities, in legal rights and in the suffrage, and each country of Europe is brought in turn under review. So impressive a showing of woman's capacity so humiliating an exhibition of the arbitrary limitations imposed upon her by the stronger sex, and so many hopeful indications of larger and better things in the future, it is safe to say were never brought together between one set of book covers before. England has been thought very slow in her recognition of the public and professional claims of women, and with justice, but in these, as in other matters, the English have a plodding persistency which accomplishes great things in the long stretch. The agitation for the extension of suffrage to woman first began in Great Britain in connection with the discussion of the reform bill of 1867. Municipal suffrage was granted in 1869, and in 1870 the act was passed conferring on women householders the power to vote at school board elections and qualifying them to sit as members of school boards, a qualification that has been availed of by increasingly large numbers. Parliamentary suffrage still remains to be worked for, and it comes up anew in each successive session. Meanwhile, the Isle of Man, which has its independent Legislature, has given women all the voting powers that men enjoy, and the experiment is considered to have proved in a high degree satisfactory.

More important than the suffrage, as many readers will think, are the educational movements, and those looking to the enlarging of professional and industrial opportunities. Dense crusts of prejudice had to be broken through before these could make headway, but they have now acquired an impetus that nothing is likely to check. At the conservative universities of Cambridge and Oxford, as well as at the University of London, young women can enjoy every educational advantage that young men are offered, and win substantially the same honors. In the medical profession such names as Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, Dr. Elizabeth Garrett Anderson, and Dr. Frances Elizabeth Hoggan, are among its distinguished ornaments, and a complete medical training, which for many years an English woman could obtain only by going to Paris or Germany, is now open to her at London. In the other European countries progress out of the mediæval condition, or rather that worse than mediæval condition of women which the revolutionary era created by destroying chivalry before intellectual quickening had begun, is only in its birth stages. It is by studying the unhappy lot of women in France, Germany, Spain and Russia that one comes to a vivid realization of their relatively high position in England and America. More than by all else will one be impressed by the fact that moral progress has been greatest where legal recognition and the enlargemination even long after the coronations of "court mourning" have been fulfilled. A lady writing from England to a friend in New York states that at Goodwood recently the princess of Wales and her sister-in-law, the crown princess of Prussia, wore mixtures of this kind. The latter lady dressed entirely in dead-black silk, with an ivory-white silk bonnet with white plumes. The princess of Wales wore a dress skirt of black and white striped satin, with a black satin brocaded overdress with white satin waist coat, and a bonnet glittering with cut jet ornaments.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years of age, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the friends suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.

F. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

a preserving kettle; heat to a boil, add the vinegar and spice, boil five minutes, skim out the fruit on to plates, boil down the syrup, put the fruit into glass jars, and pour over the syrup. Cover tightly.

LEMON MERINGUE CAKE.—Ten eggs, one pound of sifted flour, and the juice of one lemon, add the rind of two. Beat the yolks of all the eggs and the whites of seven separately; add the sugar, beating thin the flour and the juice and lemon peel. Bake as for jelly cake. To the three beaten whites add a pound and a quarter of powdered sugar, free from lumps. Add the juice and part of the rind of a lemon, and when the cakes are almost cold, spread this between the layers. The icing for the top should be made stiffer by adding more sugar.

A French Baby Farm.

A Parisian paper gives an account of a high-class baby farm known as Les Oubliettes, near Charenton. The writer says: "The good woman who takes care of them said, 'That is the son of a great lady. When she pays a visit here her carriage stops at the Jardin des Plantes; thence she takes a cab here. I have three children belonging to wives separated from their husbands, another is the son of the Marquis de — by a friend of his wife's. That little fellow who seems so sad, and is now engrossed in making a sand pie by the steps, has never received a visit. His name is Ivan, and his mother is Russian. He looks wistfully at the others when their friends comes, as it were, to gather up the crumbs of the caresses lavished on them. One day a lady embraced him and brought tears of joy to his eyes. When she went away Ivan said to his companion 'Won't you give me a little bit of your mama?'"

A Great Brought.

Richard A. Proctor says that the age of the earth is placed by some at 500,000, 000 years, and still others of later time, among them the Duke of Argyll, places it at 10,000,000 years. None place it lower than 10,000,000 years, knowing what processes have been gone through. The earth must have become old. Newton surmises, although he could give no reason for it, that the earth would at one time become perfectly dry. Since then it has been found that Newton was correct. As the earth keeps cooling it will become porous, and great cavities will be formed in the interior which will take in the water. It is estimated that this process is now in progress so far that the water diminishes at the rate of the thickness of a sheet of writing paper a year. At this rate in 9,000,000 years the water will have sunk a mile, and in 15,000,000 years every trace of water will have disappeared from the face of the globe.

Among the graceful gilets, now so fashionably worn with nearly every sort of dress, are dainty ones made of white silk and embroidered down the front and on the wide pocket flaps with small flowers like arbutus, lilies of the valley, or small carnation pinks or wrought entirely with white silk rose buds outlined with tiny mother-o'-pearl beads. These vests are very stylish and elegant, and can be worn with many different toilets.

that moral progress has been greatest where legal recognition and the enlargement of intellectual and professional opportunities has been greater." Not in England, but in France under the barbarous code of Napoleon, and in Spain. Is society honeycombed by the moral degeneracy of women. The thesis that for the well being of humanity women should not know too much is not borne out by facts any more than it is by reason.—Domestic Monthly.

A Novel Cure for Shying Horses.

"Does your horse shy, boss?" asked a small colored boy of an American reporter who was driving along the Lebanon pike in a buggy. Being anxious to know what the boy meant, the reporter pulled in his horse and told him that the animal he drove had the bad habit he referred to. "Din I kin git you sumfin what'll cure him for a nickel," said the boy. The reporter handed over the nickel, and the boy produced from the confines of his capacious pocket a small chameleon, evidently much the worse for wear, but still alive. Handing it to the reporter, the boy told him to take the lizard and keep it until the full of the next moon, when it was to be boiled to nothing in a pint of water. "What then?" said the reporter, "Why you just take an' 'uint (anoine) de eyes of yo' hawse wid it and he won't shy no mo." The reporter thought that the boy had fallen upon a shrewd way to beat him out of 5 cents, but he learned upon inquiry that it is quite a well-grounded belief among many of the negroes who live upon farms in this State that the treatment recommended by the colored boy will cure horses and mules of the trick of shying, and is often resorted to by negroes living in this section.—Nashville American.

Never Made a Failure.

"I have never made a failure of anything I ever undertook," said the seedy individual, as he answered to call of "have a drink!"

"Your appearance belies your statement," said the other. "How is it that you are in such a ragged state, if you never made a failure of anything you undertook?"

"Because," sadly smiled the other, wiping his lips, "because everything I've attempted was a failure before I took hold of it."

Sanitarians insist that cellar should never be constructed under dwelling houses; but if our houses are already built and we must for convenience make use of the cellars, we should keep them scrupulously clean from all decaying substances, give their walls a frequent coat of whitewash, secure good drainage, and above all open the outside door and windows wide every day during warm weather, and every week at least during the winter, thus effecting a free interchange of air.

Youthful rashness skips like a hare over the meshes of good counsel.

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a child. "When I can get such a prompt and pleasant relief my Bilious attacks, such as Dr. Cassen's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and is a splendid Stomach Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents.

A True Incident.

Some time ago the children's ward for incurables, in one of the large hospitals, was frequently visited by a young lady, who took great interest in the little ones. Meeting the nurse, one day on entering, she asked:

"Are there any new ones since my last visit?"

"Two, I think. One brought in yesterday. Been run over—she's very bad, too."

After speaking to several, whose eyes brightened at her coming, the lady stood by the cot where the maimed little body lay. The great pathetic eyes lifted so appealingly to hers, moved her strangely.

"What can I do for you, my dear? Is there something you would like to have?"

"Yes'm a parasol."

"A parasol! but my child you could not use it here, you know. Had you not rather have a pretty doll, and some nice fruit?"

"No'm, I'd rather have a parasol—a lacy one—more'n any other thing."

"Very well, I'll bring you one to-morrow," and giving her a pretty picture, she went away: but that strange fancy haunted her, and after returning home, and fearing that the little life might slip away before the morrow, she asked one of her brothers to go out with her to make the purchase, as it was nearly dusk.

"Just like Mary," he laughingly said.

"If the child had asked for the moon she would have been devising some plan to get it for her. Suppose we buy a box of flannels to send to India same time, Mary."

Parasols were out of season, and the clerk looked so amazed when she asked for them that she felt obliged to explain.

"I think we have a very few expensive ones laid by," he said.

After some delay they were brought, when one daintily-lined, lace-trimmed was selected; and bought for five dollars: then proceeding to the hospital, she sent the beautiful gift up to the child.

"I never saw anything like it," the nurse said next day to the giver. "She laughed and cried, and hugged and kissed it, and it has really seemed to make her forget her pain."

Nearly a week the child lingered, and then with her wasted hand grasping the dainty handle the little waif—who had found both Life and Death so hard—passed away to the Happy Land where all desires are satisfied.

The parasol was then given to another little girl, and when she died to another, until it was owned by seven in the ward, most of whom had never had the delight of holding one in their hands before; so, although the gift was neither meat nor drink, medicine nor care, it was a most gracious charity.

A Hebrew Girl's Dowry

Settling the dowry is one of the most important parts of a Hebrew engagement. Very few Hebrew girls marry now without $1,000 to $50,000. Sometimes there is some difficulty in arranging this. The proposed bride's father offers $5,000, and the proposed groom's father thinks it is not enough. They argue, wrangle, bargain, and finally compromise. No written agreement is taken, but it is officially

A Question.

Hew can we raise more corn to the acher? Why, of course, by using PUTNAM'S CORN EXTRACTOR. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor has given universal satisfaction, for it is sure, safe and painless. Like every article of real merit it has a host of imitators, and we would specially warn the public to guard against those dangerous substitutes offered for the genuine Putnam's Extractor. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

The judicious planting eucalyptus trees has been recommended by Baron Von Moller as a means of increasing and maintaining the water-supply of Australia. These trees—known also as the "blue gum" trees—are credited with remarkable power of collecting and absorbing water, and of condensing into water the moisture in the air.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

Love is the most terrible and also the most generous of the passions; it is the only one that includes in its dreams the happiness of some one else.

the proposed groom's father thinks it is not enough. They argue, wrangle, bargain, and finally compromise. No written agreement is taken, but it is officially given out that on the wedding day so much, say $7,000, will be paid down in hard cash to the bridegroom, before the ceremony takes place. Here is where some sharp practice occasionally comes in. The bride's father, after he is assured that the groom is in love with his daughter, tries to beat down the dowry, and the groom holds him to his expressed intention. An instance occurred here recently in which a Boston Hebrew fell in love with one of the pretty Brooklyn Hebrew young ladies. He became engaged, and $10,000 was promised him with the girl. On the marriage day he came to her house with his friends. The money was not forthcoming, and he was met with repeated explanations and excuses. He held to his verbal bond, but finding that the intention of the bride's father was actually to have him much less than had been agreed upon, he made excuses that he wished to be shaved and left the bridal party. Once out of the house he secured a hack, drove to the New York Central Railway Station, and took the first train for Boston; no persuasion could afterwards bring him back.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Cataract—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in ophthalmic science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of Cataract. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefited, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, M. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the cataract is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are still. No one else has ever attempted to cure cataract in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured cataract. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on cataract—Montreal Star.

"What does your husband call you by?" said a bride to a friend who had been married several years. "Does he call you ducky or lovey? My darling calls me ducky." "Does he? Mine used to call me popsey-wopsey, but he doesn't use that term now." "What does he call you then?" "He calls me, 'say there.'"

A young man had his girl out carriage-riding the other evening and the horses took fright and ran away. In turning a corner the vehicle was overturned and the young lady was pinned to the earth, the body of the carriage lying heavily across her waist. She was rendered unconscious. When she was released from her perilous position, she slowly opened her eyes as consciousness returned, and faintly gasped: "Don't—squeeze—me—quite—so—hard—next—time—John."

Oh! How tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning. Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

ROUND TOWN.

—County show next Monday and Tuesday.
—See McAlister's new fall hats.

—Regular meeting of Town Council next Monday evening.

—The wicked are taking a rest—nothing in the Police Court this week.

—Do not fail to see Gibbard & Son's fine display of Mantles at the County Show.

—Several deer hunting parties leave town next week for the north.

—E. P. Lahey's for the cheapest and best overcoat.

—See Gibbard & Son's fine display of Furniture at the County Show next week.

—Farmers, read the important announcement made by John Herring, on first page, and act accordingly.

—Full line of new mitts and gloves at McAlister's.

—A full attendance is requested of the members of Loyal True Blue Lodge, No. 18, at their regular meeting next Monday evening as business of importance will be transacted.

—Messrs. L. A. Magurn and T. West,

—Look for Gibbard & Son's fine show of Furniture at the Lennox Exhibition. It will be unusually attractive.

—Call and see that overcoat McAlister is selling for $10.

—All the arrangements for the county show have been completed, and all that is wanting now is good weather to make it a complete success.

—Gentlemen will find the cheapest wool underclothing at R. P. Lahey's.

—There will be a total eclipse of the moon on Saturday evening, but at such an early hour that it is not likely to be seen here. The time is 5.30 to 6 p.m.

—Special value in boys' overcoats and suits at McAlister's.

—A few days ago Mr. John Galvin, an employee of Potter & Williams, livermen, had a new $18 watch stolen from his pocket while he was asleep in the stable.

—New overcoatings and new trouserings opened this week at McAlister's.

—Brick is being laid down on the corner of Bridge and John-sts. for a new residence for Mr. John Wagar. The excavation of the cellar is now being proceeded with.

—McAlister's underclothing is cheaper than barley at 50c. per bushel.

—The promenade social in the Western Methodist Church on Tuesday evening was a most pleasing entertainment. The attendance was good and the evening was most enjoyable.

—McAlister is showing the finest stock of tweeds ever brought to Napanee.

—In the Eastern Methodist Church the Rev. M. L. Pearson will, on next Sunday evening, take for his subject, "The exhibition of next week," or the work of the farmer and artisan.

—The most elaborate display of Furniture ever made in this district will be made by Gibbard & Son at the County Show.

—On Friday evening last seven new white coats arrived for the 47th battalion band and on Saturday evening they received two new cornets which will place the band in a better position for engagements.

—Mr. J. S. Hulett has received from New York a patent chair in which to photograph infants. He has several other new acquisitions to his gallery which enable him to do more artistic work than ever before. Give him a call.

—Lost, on John street, about a fortnight ago, a fine woven red silk toque with a white and colored band and red silk tassel. The individual in whose possession it is will kindly leave it at this office when he will be suitably rewarded.

—The annual harvest thanksgiving service will be held in St. Mary Magdalene's Church next Sunday. The elaborate decoration of the church, usual in former years, will not be attempted this time though no doubt the church will be made look very pretty.

—S. McLaughlin has removed to his new store this week. It is large and commodious and one of the best appointed grocery establishments in the district. Space will not permit of a description of it this week. In the meantime his advertisement in another column should be read and acted upon.

—Mr. F. A. Webb has leased the hall over the second store in the new Leonard block and will in the course of a couple of weeks open out therein a rolling skating rink. Roller skating has become a very popular pastime across the line and is gaining favour here. Further particulars next week.

—Dr. J. D. Stewart, the well known oculist and aurist, died at Belleville last week from paralysis. He had been under treatment by electricity in an eastern city when his condition became much worse and he Vandalism on John Street.

The residents on this street contemplate the organization of a vigilance committee to punish ruffians who commit depredations on their property. Last spring Mr. M. Parrott had several trees girdled, and only a few nights ago two fine trees were pulled up by the roots and at the same time the tops of several fancy pickets were pulled off the fences of Mr. A. W. Grange and Mr. Thos. Symington. A stop should be put to this vandalism.

Church of England.

The second Congress of the Church of England in Canada will be held in Toronto commencing on Tuesday, Oct. 14th. Bishop Sweatman will preside. The following will represent the diocese of Ontario:—Ven. Archdeacon Jones, Rev. Rural Dean Kirkpatrick, Rev. G. L. Low, Rev. E. P. Crawford, Judge Macdonald, and Messrs. James Reynolds, R. T. Walkem and A. J. Mathe-son. Papers will be read by a number of gentlemen, including the Bishop of Ontario, and Revs. Messrs. Low and Crawford.

At Home.

The first of a series of "At Homes" in connection with the Eastern Methodist Church is to be given by the pastor on Monday evening, 13th inst. The young ladies will hold theirs a fortnight from that date. These receptions are to be held every two weeks. The young gentlemen of the congregation will invite their friends on the evening of Nov. 3rd, then will follow the "At Homes" of the mothers and the husbands on 17th Nov. and Dec. 1st. Then, if not before, the trustees, it is reported, intend to entertain the congregation at a plain tea. The last named will be without money and without price. Fifteen cents will be the admission fee on the occasion of the others.

Presented With a Purse.

Mr. Harry Reid, engineer, for thirteen years an employee of the G. T. R., and for five years on the pilot engine, has severed his connection with that road and accepted a position on the Napanee, Tamworth & Quebec Railway as conductor. He was agreeably surprised on Saturday night when Messrs. Dunnett of the Shelden Company; Smith, engine driver; and Nicholson, telegraph operator, went to his house in Kingston and presented him with a purse of $100, contributed by the Grand Trunk men and merchants of that city in consideration of the courtesy he had shown them in the despatch of business. Mr. Reid made a short reply, thanking his friends for their kind consideration and assuring them that he would never forget it.

A Painful Accident.

Reuben Woodhames, a young man of some twenty years, son of Mr. James Woodhames, sec. master at Ernestown station, met with a dreadful accident on Saturday evening last while working with a gang of men at the station, by which he suffered amputation of one leg at the ankle, and the loss of a part of his other foot, thus rendering him a cripple for life. The men were employed in relaying anew the track at the station on the south side of the road, and the section master had given orders to the switchman to switch wholly on the north side in order that the men might not be hindered at their work, and the switchman had done so during the day, but on the approach of the eastern express he shifted the switch to the south side without warning the men employed. On the approach of the express, poor Reub. thought it would be ran on the main line and while warning the men to look out, he stepped with one foot over the south switch and was caught by the express and hurled to the ground with the result as above given.

members of Loyal True Blue Lodge, No. 18, at their regular meeting next Monday evening as business of importance will be transacted.

—Messrs. L. A. Magurn and T. West, Belleville bicyclists, arrived in town Tuesday evening and left for Kingston Wednesday morning to take part in the bicycle races in that city.

—R. P. Lahey's for the cheapest and best tweed suit.

—The plate glass is now in the Campbell House block and the stores are being pushed to completion. Scott Bros., barbers, will occupy their new premises next week. They will be elegantly furnished.

—Mr. Sheriff Pruyn requests us to state that the money for the payment of deputy-returning officers for services in the recent election has arrived, and he desires that they should call at his office as early as possible and receive their allowances.

—Gent's furnishings in endless variety at McAlister's.

—Messrs. Gibbard & Son are supplying elegant furniture for the new rooms in the Campbell House. A large number of the rooms are now completed. When all are furnished the hotel will be the most commodious and complete in the district.

—For correct styles in new fall hats and caps, go to R. P. Lahey's.

—Prof. McDonald will close his dancing class here in the course of a couple of weeks, when he goes to Montreal where he will with the assistance of his son, open classes in Queen's Hall for the winter months. At the close of the quarter here he will, as a grand finale, give an assembly.

—The drawing for the organ takes place at McAlister's on Tuesday, October 7th, at 5 p.m. Be there.

—The half yearly celebration of the Lord's supper will be held in the 8th concession church, Camden, next Sabbath. The service will begin at 11 o'clock a.m. Members of other churches are cordially invited to participate in the blessed sacrament. The Rev. Mr. Smith will preach in Tamworth on Sabbath.

—Visitors to the show will find the cheapest clothing, hats, caps, furs, and men's furnishings at R. P. Lahey's.

—A partridge a few days ago flew into the residence of John T. Grange, Esq., West-st., and every day flocks of wild geese are to be seen crossing over the town. Is this an indication of game being plentiful, or are the feathery songsters of the primeval indulging in bravado over our local nimrods, and insinuating that they are harmless?

—Do Not Forget that if you are wanting Machine Oil, Axle Grease, Leather Belting, or anything in thrashing furnishing H. W. Perry's is the place to call. A full line of building hardware.

—Miss Allen, dressmaker, will remove to the new Leonard block about the second week in October. In the meantime she will be glad to see customers at her residence, corner of West and Mill Streets. She has received the fall and winter plates and is prepared to do dress and mantle making in the best possible manner.

—Mr. John Blewett has erected a brick smoke house in the rear of his store on Dunlop-st. and will this season smoke the hams and bacon he sells in his store. This will ensure nicely smoked fresh meats. The smoke house is commodious and well adapted for the purpose. Lovers of smoked meats should make a note of this.

—Sermons in behalf the Educational Society will be preached in the Eastern Methodist Church on Sabbath, the 12th instant. In the morning it is expected that an eminent minister of the connection will preach. In the evening the celebrated pulpit orator, the Rev. Dr. Douglas of Montreal, will occupy the pulpit. Fuller announcement will be made next week.

—Dr. J. D. Stewart, the well known oculist and aurist, died at Belleville last week from paralysis. He had been under treatment by electricity in an eastern city when his condition became much worse and he was brought home to Belleville, where a short time after his arrival he had the fatal attack. He leaves a wife and daughter, both of whom are well known and esteemed in Napanee. Mrs. Stewart being a daughter of Mr. Abel Yates of this town.

—One of the waiter girls of the Brisco House had a narrow escape from being burned to death Wednesday morning. She was standing near the stove when her dress caught fire. She was nearly enveloped in the flames, when some of the other girls promptly seized a couple of pails of water, which were near by, and threw it over her. Fortunately she escaped with but slight injury, her hands being the only portion of her body any way seriously burned.

—Ellen Nora Fernia, the young girl committed to gaol last week by the Mayor for prostitution and vagrancy, was on Monday ordered by His Honor Judge Wilkison to be transferred to the Girls' Industrial Refuge at Toronto for a period not exceeding five years. This institution is in connection with the Mercer Institute, and is a reformatory for young girls who have fallen. They are discharged as soon as they prove themselves able to lead a virtuous life. This is the first commitment to the Refuge from this county.

—The judges of the prize farm competition arranged by the Agricultural and Arts Association of the province, have handed in their report. They report favorably on the majority of the farms visited and the evidences of progress in husbandry which they witnessed. Among the prizes we notice that John Sharp, Esq., reeve of Ernestown, was awarded a bronze medal for his farm which contains 200 acres and is situated on the Bath road, ten miles south-east of Napanee. Mr. John Wilmot's farm, township of Pittsburgh, was also awarded a prize medal.

—Remember the Tavernier Dramatic Company in the Opera House next Monday and Tuesday evenings. The company have been playing in Ottawa during the provincial exhibition and drew large audiences. All the papers write in their praise. The Citizen says, "They beyond question deserved the frequent plaudits which were tendered to their really first-class rendition of the various parts assigned to the caste." In order to give our citizens an opportunity to inspect the display in the palace and at the same time attend the theatre, the curtain will not rise Monday night till half past eight o'clock. Reserved seats now on sale at J. J. Perry's drug store.

—The St. Quinten Opera Co. gave two excellent performances in the Opera House on Friday and Saturday evenings. The bill first night was "La Mascotte," and to say that it was most delightful but properly describes its rendition. Miss St. Quinten's "Bettina" was probably the cleverest representation of a character ever witnessed here, while Mr. Wolf as "Prince Lorenzo" from the outset kept the audience bubbling over with laughter by his drollery and witty "yags." Miss Marcellus sustained the part of the "Fiametta" with much ability and Mr. Reid Wilson as "Rocco" was more than funny. Several of the members of the Company being afflicted with bad colds, the singing of the support was not up to expectations, though the music all round was very satisfactory. Saturday night "Olivette" was presented and the same high degree of merit shown in the first performance was sustained. Should the Company return they will be greeted with larger audiences, the deficiency in this respect being caused by the inclement weather.

thought it would be ran on the main line and while warning the men to look out, he stepped with one foot over the south switch and was caught by the express and hurled to the ground with the result as above given. Considerable indignation is expressed against the switchman for not warning the men of the change of switch. Drs. Rutan, Price and Meacham were summoned and attended to the wounded man, who passed through the ordeal with great firmness.

Mr. Abel Yates' Drama.

We clip the subjoined advertisement from the New York Clipper. It will be seen from it that Mr. Yates has his play completed and ready for the boards. The adv. is written in Abel's own quaint way and as an item of local interest we reproduce it:—

A CARD TO MANAGERS

Of Successful, Critical and Speculative Character.

I am poor (it's a crime); I am unknown as author, (that mars merit, if any); but I have written and got copyright to a new Drama I think, with smooth, fair talent, nicely selected and duly managed, would please from peasant to prince. The plot is laid in California. It's a Tragi-Comedy in four acts. Title, VIOLETS, OR JASPER LUCKINGS, THE KANUCK LANDLORD AND CALIFORNIA GARDENER.

Cast of Characters:

Nellie.....	Orphan and Violet Girl
Ruth.....	Widow
Eliza.....	Niece of Ruth
Rachel.....	Joe's Wife
Alonzo.....	Villain
Jack.....	Gambler
Joe.....	From Jarvey
Merrill.....	Wells Fargo's Bank Agent
Kit Welch.....	At the Willows
Kentuck and Hoosier.....	At Cherokee Ravine
Jasper.....	Kanuck Landlord and California Gardener

Nine stage people (three are explained). I am no Diamond, but if managed right might make a fair Jasper. I never saw Pat Rooney but once (bar self-eulogy). He said I'd done 'em all. I never saw Billy Emmett but once. He said hurry up my piece and come to the front, for I am getting old. I am tired being called Alvin—for nothing, when I can't change my looks. What good manager will correspond with the idea, if there is merit, by shaping and shaking out sufficient to place before the public for true verdict? Address ABEL YATES, Box 253, Cape Vincent, N. Y., or Napanee, Ontario, Canada. Either place will catch me.

Grand Concert and Tea at Tamworth.

The Presbyterians of Tamworth give a grand tea and concert on Tuesday evening next, the 7th inst., in the town hall of that enterprising little town. The Presbyterians have had the reputation of giving a first-class bill of fare in past years, but this year they are determined to excell all previous entertainments. They have secured the able services of Prof. Heath to preside at the organ, while Messrs. Crumley, Middleton and Galoway of Kingston will keep the audience laughing and crying almost simultaneously with their side-splitting eccentricities. In addition Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Rose, whose services have been so much appreciated in past years, will also endeavour to be present on the occasion, and Miss Wagar, who has just returned from California, an excellent songstress, will sing a couple of songs. The Revs. A. Young of Napanee and Depew of Tamworth, and John W. Bell, Esq., M.P., will deliver addresses. The tea will be served at 7.30; concert to begin at 8.30. This will give an opportunity for those who have been attending the show at Napanee and coming home hungry to come right down from the train and have their tea and enjoy themselves the balance of the evening. The tickets which are only 30c., remember, admits to both tea and concert.

Photograph Gallery at Newburgh.

M. A. Jackson has constructed a portable photograph gallery on Main-st., Newburgh, and as he is going to return to Tamworth for the winter, all of those wanting first-class pictures should call at once. 44-3 in.

DISTRICT NEWS.

—B. McMahon of the Edinburgh Hotel, Kingston, has purchased the Anglo-American from Geo. Hoggard, Belleville.

—Dr. Tuttle's office and Wright's store at Tweed were entered by burglars on Saturday night and some money and promissory notes stolen.

—Friday morning ten bicyclists rode into Kingston from Gananoque. They were members of the Toronto Bicycle Club westward bound. They have been on a visit to Ottawa. They passed through Napanee on Saturday.

—On Saturday afternoon, as Mr. H. C. Kennedy of Morrisburgh, and his sister, Mrs. Urquhart, were returning from a visit to Frankford their horse, frightened by the approach of a train, bolted and the buggy upset. One of Mr. Kennedy's arms was dislocated, and he received several cuts on the head and bruises on the body. Mrs. Urquhart was also bruised considerably. Mr. Kennedy went home by the midnight train.

—The temperance men of Kingston district held a temperance meeting on the 25th inst., at Glenvale, under the auspices of the Sydenham Blue Ribbon Association. There were fifteen speakers. The Scott Act was discussed and strong reasons advanced for the passage of the Act in Frontenac. A motion made to the effect that application be had for the submission of the Act to the people was carried. A committee was named to take the management of the matter. It meets here on Thursday to arrange details and discuss the advisability of testing the popularity of the Act in the city.

—At Kingston, on Friday evening last, a woman got in a G. T. R. car, bound east. She held her baby up to the window, near Wales. Suddenly it dropped from her hands and disappeared. The woman frantically jumped out of the car after it, the train's speed being about forty miles an hour. It was stopped as soon as possible and a freight train notified to pick up the mangled remains of the woman and child, as it was not expected that they were alive. Both were found, however, alive and but little the worse of the episode through which they had passed.

—John Frall, John Henry Zufelt and Mary Ann Harrigan were before J. J. B. Flint, on Friday last at Belleville, for a preliminary examination on a charge of burglariously entering the house of Mr. H. B. Rathbun, Deseronto, on the night of the 29th of July and stealing silverware to the value of $700. Mr. H. B. Rathbun, jr., and Mr. John Croft identified portions of the silver found with the gang as part of that which belonged to Mr. Rathbun and had been stolen. About twenty witnesses appeared from Deseronto and the members of the gang were committed to stand their trial. The prisoners exhibited nervousness on hearing the decision.

Bible Society Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Napanee Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society will be held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, October 9th, at 7.30 o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Thos. J. Hodgkin, agent of the Society, by the resident ministers of the town, and by members of the committee. As the Society does an important work a large audience is requested.

A BOLD CLAIM.
The Wild Strawberry Plant possesses rare virtue as a cleansing, cooling, astringent, antiseptic, and healing medicine, and when combined with other valuable vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, it is an unfailing remedy in all bowel complaints.

Merit Proven.

Dollar upon dollar is frequently spent on the faith of recommendations for articles entirely worthless. Not so with McGregor's Speedy Cure, you are not asked to purchase it until its merits are proven. Call at T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores and at Jas. Aylesworth's drug store, Tamworth, and get a free trial bottle, and if not convinced it will cure you of the worst forms of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, &c., no matter of how long standing, it costs you nothing. Sold in 50c. and $1.00 bottles. See testimonials from persons in your own town.
